STATEMENT OF FACTS.

J. L. Holden, while enlisting men for the army in 1862, under orders from the Adjutant General of Maine, was thrown from his carriage without fault of his and received a permanent injury to his spine, so that he is unable to perform any hard labor and has symptoms of paralysis in his lower limbs. He applied to the U. S. for a pension, and as he was not in U. S. service the Pension Department refused to pension him and informed him that it belonged to the State of Maine to pension him.
