For names of towns and plantations in the several counties that have made no returns, see foregoing abstract—whole number amounting to eighty-five.

From the foregoing abstract it will appear that the whole military force of the state as returned to this office, for eighteen hundred forty-nine, is fifty-five thousand six hundred and forty-nine.

The civil officers of seventy-one of the four hundred and fiftyeight cities, towns and plantations in the state, have neglected to make returns the past year, and consequently incurred the penalty of the fourth section of the new law which imposes a forfeiture of a sum not less than twenty dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, for each neglect of duty.

These penalties have not been exacted. Whether at least, measures should not be taken to compel performance of duty in this regard, is matter to which I beg leave to call the attention of the executive.

Upon the annual returns made to the general government, depends the quantity of arms apportioned to this state, under the United States law of eighteen hundred and eight. Full returns from the whole state would probably show a military force exceeding one-fifth the aggregate herewith exhibited.

The following companies have been organized and furnished with arms, under the law providing for a volunteer corps, viz :

LIGHT INFANTRY.

One company in Saco. One company in Portland.

ARTILLERY.

One company in Wiscasset. One company in Gardiner. One company in Harmony.

RIFLEMEN.

One company in Leeds and Monmouth.

One company in Rumford.

One company in Madison and Solon.

One company in Auburn, Minot and Danville.

One company in Boothbay.

One company in Athens.

One company in Starks.

One company in Oldtown.

One company in Cornville.

One company in Madison and Temple.

Making in all fifteen companies. Most of these companies are large, well officered, and thoroughly disciplined. They have received on loan from the state, seven hundred and forty-nine muskets and rifles, and six pieces of ordnance, which they will undoubtedly be found ready to use effectually upon any public exigency.

Several other companies in different parts of the state are now in progress of organization.

To establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, and provide for the common defense, is declared both by our national and state constitutions to be the purposes for which government is instituted.

In my last annual report, I took occasion to urge at some length, the importance of a well organized militia, as essential to the common defense in respect to aggressions by foreign powers.

Events in neighboring states no less than all governmental experience, ought to admonish us that domestic tranquility can no more effectually be insured, than the common defense provided for, without an efficient military force at the command of the execuutive authorities.

In our own state since the legislature assembled the government of one of our cities has found it necessary to call out the militia in aid of the police to suppress an excited and desperate mob. The call was promptly and nobly responded to, by a volunteer company organized under the law of eighteen hundred and forty eight, and proved effectual in answering the demands of law and order. The law of the land happily found at its command, the power of compelling obedience to its injunctions.

While the measurable readiness with which the volunteer corps has, under the most discouraging circumstances been organized, demonstrates that the martial spirit in our state is not extinguished, but only awaits the fostering care of the legislature to manifest itself, the prompt and active service which it rendered the public on the occasion referred to, as well as signal instances of the same character constantly occurring in our country, attests the vital importance of an organized military force as an auxiliary to the civil power.

Until the laws and the execution of the laws, have the assent of every citizen within our borders, be his character, education and designs what they may, the government cannot be sustained by moral force alone. Especially under free institutions permitting, as they do, and cherishing the largest liberty consistent with the common good, does the civil arm frequently require to be held up by the impression at least, among the people that it has the means of calling to its support physical force. The vastly increased wealth and material power of this people have indeed rendered it improbable that any foreign power will invade our shores; but that very growth necessarily carries with it many new elements of disorgani-Thus while our statute books reflect the opinion of the zation. legislature to the effect that the necessity of a thoroughly organized and ready citizen soldiery is much less than formerly, the actual state of things most evidently shows that, that necessity is every day becoming more urgent.

So frequently have I on former occasions, urged the necessity of some sort of a military organization, that to elaborate upon its importance at this time, would seem entirely superfluous.

The enactment of the law of eighteen hundred and forty-eight, was an attempt on the part of the friends of the once favorite militia system of the state, to revive, so far as the state of public opinion would juitify, some part of its spirit and power. It was but an experiment, made too in a state of the public mind somewhat unfavorable to its adoption and success.

To a certain extent that experiment has been encouraging. It is for the wisdom of the legislature to say, whether the degree of favor which it has met does not demand of them to improve and perfect a system confessedly at the time of its adoption in many respects defective, and requiring improvement.

The quota of arms belonging to the state from the general government, for the years eighteen hundred and forty-nine and eighteen hundred and fifty, have been directed to be furnished in percussion rifles and muskets, of the most approved model.

The appropriation for the arsenal at Portland, has been exhausted in painting and repairs. That for the Bangor arsenal has been mainly expended in labor upon the arms and in putting the buildings in a suitable state of repair.

There are forty artillery gun houses belonging to the state, containing seventy-five pieces of artillery. These houses are rapidly going to decay, and the guns in them are thus not only exposed to great injury, but some of them have within the last year actually been stolen and carried out of the country. I have heretofore recommended the sale of these gun houses and the deposit of their contents in the arsenals at Portland and Bangor. I beg leave urgently to repeat the recommendation. In the event of the adoption of the measure suggested, it will be necessary to provide an additional building connected with the arsenal at Portland, sufficient to contain the artillery property which may most easily be transported to that point, the buildings at Portland not being more than sufficiently large to hold the arms and ordnance already deposited there. Such a building, it is estimated, will cost seven hundred dollars.

> I have the honor to remain, With the highest respect, Your obedient servant, ALFRED REDINGTON.

> > Adjutant General.
