The past year has been an exceptionally hard one for insurance companies in the country generally, and but few of them have made any money on business in Maine.

The month of December, 1881, will long be remembered as one of fearful destruction by fire, and whatever premiums had been earned by companies during the eleven months previous, were rapidly swallowed up by the holocaust of the closing month of the year.

A glance at the tables I have prepared will show that insurance companies are not those soulless corporations they are sometimes thought to be, which receive so largely from the public without returning the just equivalent.

A reference to Table VII shows that the fire premiums received by companies of other States and countries, upon business done in this State for the year 1881, amounted to $767,452.80; the losses paid were $521,206.66; gross premiums over losses, $246,246.14. The same companies paid in taxes to the State, on the same premiums, over eleven thousand dollars, besides fees for licenses, &c.

When it is remembered that it costs companies at least one-fourth of their premium income to pay expenses, which would amount to $191,863.20, it will be seen that of the premiums received in this State the margin of profit is so small, that if it were not for the expectation of something better in the future, the most of the companies would withdraw from the State at once, or materially increase their rates of insurance. And yet the Commissioner is constrained to believe that the fault lies at the doors of the companies. It is somewhat difficult to understand why some companies have uniformly made money in this State, while others have as uniformly lost money, and while a careful comparison of the annual statements of the different companies for several years past shows that the rates have not materially differed among the several companies.

The Commissioner is not an expert in insurance matters, and does not claim to be; and yet it is only too plain to the common comprehension, that in a large number of cases the moral hazard is greater than the fire hazard. Men who are heavily mortgaged are not so careful of their property as those who own their property unincumbered; and yet companies make but little if any difference in rates between the two classes of risks; and the mortgaged property is insured just as cheaply, if insured at all, as it would be if unincumbered. There should not only be a better discrimination in risks, but a better discrimination in rates. When companies will take into consideration the moral hazard as well as the fire hazard, in fixing rates upon property, then the premium income will increase in the same ratio that the losses by fire will decrease.

The Commissioner congratulates himself, as well as the people of the State, that the companies doing business in this State have all passed the ordeal of 1881 without impairment of capital or serious decrease in surplus.

By consulting Table IV, in the last column will be found the excess of income over expenditures for 1881, which is not a bad showing when we consider the amount of property destroyed by fire during the past year.

The Commissioner will make extra efforts, however, to ascertain the condition of the different companies, before they are again re-licensed in July next.

There are three stock-marine insurance companies, organized under the laws of this State—Ocean Insurance Company, Portland; Merchants' Marine Insurance Company, Bangor; Union Insurance Company, Bangor. These are all believed to be in good condition and perfectly solvent. A synopsis of their annual statements will be found in this report.

The mutual companies of this State have made their annual statements, which have also been tabulated in this report in Tables VIII and IX.

Respectfully submitted.

JOSEPH B. PEAKS,
