B. By Class and sanction

The information contained in this chart is sorted by applicable sanction. The order in which the sections appear is based on the severity of the sanction, starting with the most severe. Civil violations are grouped with the Classes of crimes within which the civil monetary penalties fall. For example, a civil violation carrying a monetary sanction of up to $1000 is listed at the end of the listing for Class D crimes (the fines for which range as high as $1000). Crimes called "felonies" are printed at the end of Class C crimes; "misdemeanors" are found at the end of Class E crimes, as are traffic "infractions." Open-ended (i.e., no maximum defined) terms and civil monetary penalties are located near the end of the chart.

II. CRIMES

There are 868 sections listed here that provide criminal penalties. Ninety also provide alternative civil sanctions, giving the prosecutor a certain amount of discretion in prosecuting violations of those statutes.

A. By title and section

The information contained in this chart is printed in the order the sections providing criminal penalties appear in the Maine Revised Statutes.

B. By Class

The information contained in this chart is sorted by the Class as designated in the statute or as provided through the operation of Title 17-A, section 4-A. Murder is listed first, then Class A crimes through Class E crimes. "Felonies" are found at the end of the listing of Class C crimes, and "misdemeanors" are listed at the end of the Class E crimes. Open-ended (i.e., no maximum defined) terms are located near the end of the chart.

B. By sanction

The information contained in this chart is sorted by applicable sanction. The order in which the sections appear is based on the severity of the sanction, starting with the most severe. Violations termed "traffic infractions" are listed at the end. ("Traffic infractions" in Title 29 are shown as "traff inf" in the CROSS-REFERENCE column if the statute provides a sanction different than the general traffic infraction consequences; otherwise, Title 29 "traffic infractions" are indicated with the cite to the general penalty section of Title 29, section 2303, subsection 1: "(29:2303,1).") Open-ended (i.e., no maximum defined) civil monetary penalties are located near the end of the chart.

B. By Class and sanction

The information contained in this chart is sorted by applicable sanction. The order in which the sections appear is based on the severity of the sanction, starting with the most severe. Civil violations are grouped with the Classes of crimes within which the civil monetary penalties fall. For example, a civil violation carrying a monetary sanction of up to $1000 is listed at the end of the listing for Class D crimes (the fines for which range as high as $1000). Crimes called "felonies" are printed at the end of Class C crimes; "misdemeanors" are found at the end of Class E crimes, as are traffic "infractions." Open-ended (i.e., no maximum defined) terms and civil monetary penalties are located near the end of the chart.

Re: Update, Public Law 1991

Enclosed are two charts that supplement the 1990 report by listing changes to the Maine Revised Statutes involving crimes and civil violations enacted since the original reports was printed. Chapters of Public Law 1991 (115th Legislature, 1st and 2nd Regular Sessions and 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th Special Sessions) that add new crimes or civil violations, amend pertinent elements of or sanctions for crimes or civil violations or repeal existing crimes or civil violations are briefly summarized in these two charts.

The charts should be included with or attached to the 1990 report. They are not sorted by "Class and Sanction" or by "Category" (the original report is), but appear in the order they are codified in the Maine Revised Statutes. The original report describes the categories used in the charts and the meaning of the terms used. As in the original report, statutes administered by the Department of Inland Fisheries and Wildlife and by the Department of Marine Resources (Title 12) are included in a separate chart.
