SUMMARY

Through an adjustment in the school funding formula, this bill would have provided an incentive to schools to reenroll students who have dropped out. For the first year that dropouts return to school, a school unit would receive as part of its state subsidy the statewide average per pupil operating rate times the number of dropouts it enrolls. This is an incentive because under the funding formula the pupil count lags a year behind, and those students would not begin to be counted for subsidy purposes until the following year. In the 2nd year, a unit that receives less than the average state share subsidy would continue to get the statewide average per pupil operating rate times the number of dropouts it retains on its roll as a continued incentive. Units that receive at or above the average state share subsidy would get their normal reimbursement under the formula in the 2nd and subsequent years.

The Department of Education was to adopt rules necessary to implement this bill and to provide technical assistance to school units in providing appropriate services for dropouts once reenrolled in school.
