SUMMARY

This bill would have established the Decennial Commission on Maine's Future, which would have convened every 10 years following the publication of each decennial census. The commission's charge would have been to review and recommend changes to the "Maine Vision," analyze forces and trends in Maine life, estimate the future effects of those forces and trends and recommend actions to mitigate, avoid or encourage those various effects. The commission would have also reviewed the capacity of government and private institutions in Maine to anticipate and react to the forces and trends affecting Maine's future and recommend actions to enhance that capacity. This was one of 8 bills containing the recommendations of the Commission on Maine's Future.

These 3 offices were directed to review the plans, develop coordinated strategies and explore resolutions of conflicts in judicial, executive and legislative priorities.
