SUMMARY

This bill changes the law requiring a nuclear power plant to provide notice of releases of radioactive materials. This bill requires notice of routine or continuous emissions of radioactive materials in every 24-hour period to be made within the next 24-hour period. The bill also proposed to require that notice of a scheduled release be followed up by notice describing the actual release within 24 hours of the release. The committee amendment (H-939) eliminated this latter proposed notice requirement.

SUMMARY

This bill would have given public utilities, upon the abandonment of service by a railroad company, an easement in the railroad right-of-way for the purpose of maintaining and replacing existing utility installations. The bill also would have allowed utilities to take by eminent domain railroad property for siting transmission lines unless the lines would substantially interfere with railroad service.

The committee amendment (H-1036) strikes the bill and replaces it with language which gives explicit jurisdiction to the PUC to resolve disputes arising out of agreements between railroad companies and telephone or electric utilities if the parties have agreed that the commission shall resolve those disputes.

SUMMARY

This bill proposed to transfer the jurisdiction for settling pole attachment rate disputes from the Public Utilities Commission to the Federal Communications Commission.

The committee amendment (H-991) strikes the language of the bill and replaces it with language that requires the PUC to adopt rules governing pole attachment rate disputes. The commission is directed to consider various formulas, among them the formula adopted by the FCC. Nothing in this amendment requires the commission to adopt or give greater weight in its deliberations to the federal formula. The rules are to be adopted no later than I year after the effective date of the Act.
