SUMMARY

Public Law 1991, chapter 193 added an exclusion from unemployment insurance for individuals in the employ of a governmental entity serving on a temporary basis in case of medical emergency. Such an exclusion is not allowed under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act, 26 United States Code, Section 3304(a)(6)(A) and Section 3309(b)(3)(D). This bill removed that exclusion.

Committee Amendment "A" (H-1025) added a fiscal note.

AMENDMENTS ADOPTED

H-1189

SUMMARY

This bill established an alternative base period for determining unemployment compensation eligibility, so that individuals with the required amount of earnings can qualify even if those wages were earned closer to the time of application for unemployment compensation benefits than is allowed under current law.

Committee Amendment "A" (H-1189) replaced the original bill and removed an earnings requirement of at least two times the average weekly wage in each of two calendar quarters. The amendment also established a higher earnings requirement for individuals eligible for extended benefits or Emergency Unemployment Compensation, so that they could continue to receive those federally supported benefits. It also deferred one-half of the scheduled increase in the maximum weekly benefit due in June, 1992 to June 1993 and the other half of the increase until June, 1994. The amendment stated that federally allocated positions within the Department of Labor may not be subject to furlough days and shutdown days, subject to the agreement of the parties to any collective bargaining agreements. A fiscal note was also added.

House Amendment "B" to Committee Amendment "A" (H-1298) replaced the Committee Amendment changes in earnings requirements in response to notice that the federal government withdrew its support of those changes. The House Amendment established an alternate base period of the last 4 completed quarters immediately preceding the individual's benefit year. The amendment gave the department authority to establish procedures to gather wage information for this purpose. The House Amendment ensured that an individual enrolled in a degree-granting program, rather than an approved training program, would not automatically be denied benefits. The House Amendment also included the same provisions on the deferral of the scheduled maximum benefit increase and furlough days for federally allocated positions that were in the Committee Amendment. A fiscal note was also included.
