41 42 Sec. 240. Transition clause. All appointments heretofore made by the Governor and other persons referred to in this Act shall continue in force and effect on the effective date of this Act. All provisions in this Act regarding qualifications, term of office and appointment of members to the boards and commissions affected shall apply to all appointments and reappointments made after the effective date of this Act.

STATEMENT OF FACT

bill is designed to provide uniformity in the procedures under which the licensing boards in the Department of Business Regulation administer professional and occupational licensing laws. Although substantive standards for licensing and enforcement differ in that they are tailored to the specific occupations or professions, the procedures by which these standards are applied should be basically the same. Confusion results from the innumerable variations in the statutes of these boards. The variations are most troublesome to the public but also to board members who work hard at fulfilling their responsibilities amidst a maze of complex legal requirements, usually without the presence of legal counsel.

Basic procedures have been identified, and unilanguage developed to govern hearings, rulemaking, contracts, investigations, disciplinary procedures, penalties, use of criminal history information in licensing, terms and procedures for board appointments, meetings and record keeping. In a unique considerations did not permit complete uniformity, but these are limited exceptions. In developing the uniform language, conformity with the Maine Administrative Procedure Act was a primary consideration. As a result, language which was either inconsistent with or superfluous to the Maine Administrative Procedure Act has been replaced by provisions which are designed to guide the boards in their compliance with all of the statutes.

 In a few areas, trends in recent case law have raised questions as to the continuing validity of certain provisions in these statutes, some of which have been in place for many years. Here, changes have been made which preserve legislative intent but which are designed to avoid unnecessary legal challenges.

The substance of the amendments embodied in this bill is described as follows, reflecting where each is incorporated.

Sections 1 and 2. Maine Athletic Commission. The Maine Athletic Commission's authority to regulate boxing and professional wrestling is currently set out separately, in Title 8, chapters 5 and 6. As a result, these chapters contain extensive duplication and confusing cross-referencing, and the separation of subject matter serves no apparent purpose. These sections of the bill combine the 2 existing chapters into a new Title 8, chapter 6-A, retaining the substance and most of the language in the existing law except where changes identified have been made to conform to the uniform approach embodied in this bill.

28 Sections 2, 3, 7, 13, 34, 42, 43, 57, 66, 82, 83, 90, 91, 103, 117, 126, 141, 148, 160, 173, 174, 186, 187, 197, 210, 211, 212, 223 and 232.

Board membership. These sections employ standardized language to clarify procedures and terms for the appointment of members to these occupational licensing agencies. Outdated language concerning initial appointments has been repealed and replaced with language which continues to effectuate legislative intent that members' terms be staggered by fixing the number of terms which expire in any one year and by clarifying that the term relates to the office rather than to the individual's service. The number of consecutive terms any individual may serve

1 has been uniformly limited to 2 5-year terms, 2 4-year terms, 3 3-year terms or 4 2-terms. Removal 3 of members is currently provided for in a variety of 4 and several board statutes are silent on this 5 issue. Uniform language is substituted or 6 which provides for removal for cause, as that is the 7 standard most commonly used. Finally, several 8 utes contain requirements that the Governor appoint 9 new board members from a list submitted by a trade or 10 professional association. Case law from other juris-11 dictions is split on the issue of whether such provi-12 sions are invalid on the ground that they unconstitutionally delegate legislative authority to private 13 14 Where they occur, these sections have been 15 adjusted to permit rather than require the Governor 16 appointments from trade association recommake 17 mendations to cure this possible legal defect.

Meetings and record keeping. These sections use uniform language requiring a minimum of one meeting per year, and permitting other meetings to be held as necessary to conduct board business. These additional meetings may be called by the chairman or by majority of board members. Language requiring meetings in particular months has been deleted because it often creates unnecessary expense and scheduling problems. Quorum requirements are set at a fixed number equal to a majority of a full voting memberof each board, avoiding problems of interpretation which have arisen in the past on this issue. Unnecessarily detailed provisions regarding record keeping, many of which also generate expensive duplication due to computer use, are deleted and replaced with general language requiring the keeping of such minutes and records as are necessary to ordinary Requirements that licenses carry a board functions. seal or signature of a board officer have deleted to eliminate unnecessary expense and delays in the issuance of licenses for those boards within the Department of Business Regulation which utilize the computerized license process.

Rulemaking. These sections contain changes in and additions to the agencies' rule-making provisions to clarify and conform them to the Maine Administrative Procedure Act. As a result, each board will have a simple statement of its general rule-making authority. Existing language governing rulemaking in specific areas, whether mandatory or permissive, has been retained. A reference to the controlling procedures in the Maine Administrative Procedure Act, Title 5, chapter 375, subchapter II, is included, and provisions which are either inconsistent with or superfluous to the Maine Administrative Procedure Act are repealed.

Hearings. These sections add uniform language to each board's statute to effectuate several goals. First, it is clearly provided that each board may conduct both investigatory and adjudicatory hearings, and further that hearings may be held for other poses deemed necessary by the board in fulfilling its responsibilities. Second, the Maine Administrative Procedure Act requirements relative to license hearings have been set out in simple terms to assist the boards in determining what their responsibilities are and to give clearer notice to applicants concerning their rights to a hearing. Finally, each board has been given subpoena power to insure that necessary witnesses and documentary evidence are available so that a meaningful hearing can be held without unnecessary delays. At present, boards without this power must apply to the Attorney General for a subpoena, which is unduly burdensome. The possibility for abuse of this authority can be eliminated by oversight from the Attorney General's office in preparing the subpoenas as counsel for the agencies, and by the 1 existing mechanisms, in the Maine Administrative 2 Procedure Act for challenging a subpoena.

- Contracts. Specific reference is made to each agency's authority to enter into contracts to carry out its responsibilities, most frequently used in the areas of licensing examinations and investigations. The authority to contract exists under current law. These sections simply refer to that authority to avoid objections which have been raised in the past. This provision does not affect existing statutes governing contract procedures and review, which are applicable to state agencies generally.

Criminal convictions as disciplinary grounds. Many board statutes provide for suspension or revocation of a license on the basis of conviction of specified crime or class of crime. Two problems have been addressed in this area. First, the use of criminal history information in occupational licensing is subject to the provisions in Title 5, chapter 341, entitled "Occupational License Disqualification on Basis of Criminal Record." There is little awareness of this law, enacted in 1975, which limits the types and age of convictions used and establishes certain standards and procedures applicable to licensing actions based in whole or in part on criminal history. To increase awareness and utilization of this language has been added to those statutes which cite criminal convictions as the basis for disciplinary action specifying that these actions are subject to

1 the limitations of Title 5, chapter 341. The 2nd 2 problem encountered in a few of these statutes is 3 their reliance on constitutionally suspect language 4 such as "crimes of moral turpitude." This language is vague, of dubious relevance to licensing deci-6 sions, susceptible of abuse in its application, and 7 would probably be held unconstitutional if chal-8 lenged. Perhaps more importantly, this type of stan-9 dard is of little value to a licensing board which 10 cannot interpret it and which has been advised by 11 counsel to avoid reliance upon it. Such language, 12 where it appears, has been replaced by language util-13 ized in the occupational licensing disqualification 14 law, which is tailored to constitutional require-15 ments.

Reciprocal licensure. Many board statutes permit issuance of a Maine license without examination to persons holding a current license in another state, provided the qualifications required by that other state are deemed by the board to be the equivalent of those qualifications required here. Current statutes use a variety of terms to describe this required equivalence of qualifications, although the standard of comparison is basically the same. Uniform language has been inserted which requires that applicants for reciprocal licensure must show that the qualifications imposed in the state of their previous licensure are "equivalent" to those required under Maine law. This standard protects the public by requiring that such persons have the same level of qualifications, while providing the boards with flexibility to accept comparable or higher level credentials which may not be exactly the same as those specified in Maine law. In the case of the auctioneers license law, ambiguous language concerning license requirements applicable to a nonresident who does not hold a license in his state of residence has been clarified.

Application and examination fees. A variety of approaches are currently used in the area of application and examination fees. Where these fees are not separately established, license fees must be used to subsidize both functions, and in some cases persons who are denied licenses must forfeit a disproportionately large portion of their fee. Fixing the amount of application and examination fees by statute impractical, particularly in the case of examination fees which may change on a few months' notice independent examination services are used. Where possible, uniform language has been inserted to authorize these boards to establish separate application and examination fees, within the limitation that the amounts must be reasonable and necessary for their purpose.

Sections 47, 61, 77, 95, 132, 152, 163, 166 and 226.

"Good character" requirements for licensure. Several statutes contain requirements that applicants be "of good character." Although this standard has not been stricken by the courts per se, it is of little use and has already been dropped from many licensing statutes. As a standard for licensure, "good character" provides little guidance as to its proper application. This is particularly true in view of a trend in case law away from almost unlitted discretion in licensing decisions toward closer scrutiny of the basis of these decisions. The vagueness of this standard, its questionable relevance in a particular situation, and its susceptibility to inconsistent application further limit its usefulness. To avoid these problems, "good character" standards have been replaced with a requirement that applicants demonstrate that they are trustworthy and competent to practice in a manner which will safeguard the interests of the public. language is taken from the real estate license law, where it has been used effectively. It more closely reflects the relevant scope of inquiry for occupa-

- tional licensing purposes while still retaining the flexibility necessary to respond to a variety of concerns which cannot all be specifically articulated in the law.

Citizenship requirements for licensure. Several 7 8 license statutes contain language which can 9 applied to deny licensure to persons who are not United States citizens. A recent United States 10 Supreme Court case indicates that a citizenship re-11 12 quirement is unconstitutional in this context, and as 13 a result these provisions have been repealed where 14 they appear.

License renewal; grace period. Grace periods governing applications for license renewal or reinstatement submitted after the statutorily prescribed renewal date now vary from 30 days to an indefinite period. Some licensing statutes have no grace period at all, subjecting the individual whose renewal application is one day late to all requirements initial applicants must comply with, including examination. Uniform language has been inserted which balances the competing interests of fairness to licensees and protection of the public. A 90-day grace period is established, during which late renewal can be effected on payment of a $10 late fee together the prescribed renewal fee. An applicant seeking late renewal after the 90-day period, but within 2 years of the date of expiration, will be subject to all requirements governing initial applicants, unless the board decides that examination may be waived consistent with the best interests of the public.
