STATEMENT OF FACTS

The Maine Historical Society, a state-wide non-profit organization maintains a historical library in Portland, Maine, which is continually consulted by students of Maine history and research writers not only throughout the state, but from all parts of the country. Its income is derived from the customary state appropriation, a small income from a limited supply of invested funds, dues from members, and the receipts from summer visitors to the Longfellow House, which is owned and must be kept by the Society.
