Honorable Anne M. Carney, Chair
Honorable Amy Kuhn, Chair
Members of the Joint Standing Committee on Judiciary
State House Station 115
Augusta, Maine 04333-0007

Dear Senator Carney, Representative Kuhn and Committee Members:

Pursuant to the directive of the Maine Revised Statutes, Title 1, section 95, I submit the enclosed Revisor's Report for this year, which may be known and cited as RR 2025, Chapter 2. The Revisor's Report is prepared under the authority of Title 1, chapter 4. The corrections made in the report take effect on October 1, 2026, except as otherwise indicated in the report.

As you will note, this is a lengthy Revisor's Report with six parts. Part A contains the changes traditionally made in a Revisor's Report, such as correcting numbering conflicts, grammar and punctuation and other clerical errors, but also contains an inordinate number of corrections to cross-references. This is due to the implementation of a new program that allows us to find and confirm cross-references in the statutes. This new program identified numerous incorrect cross-references, usually due to a prior repeal of the referenced statute.

Parts B to F implement Public Law 2019, chapter 475, which directed the Revisor's Office to review the statutes to identify references to individuals throughout the statutes that need to be made gender-neutral and to implement those revisions through the Revisor's Report as soon as reasonably practicable. In accordance with this directive, we have included in this year's Revisor's Report corrections to gender-specific references contained in Title 13-B, Title 13-C, Title 16, Title 17 and Title 17-A. We attempted to make gender-neutral Title 14 (Court Procedure – Civil) but because most of the language in that title is so archaic, it cannot be done in the Revisor's Report with any confidence as to whom many of the gender-specific references refer. Moreover, many sections have not been amended since before the 1964 revision, bringing into doubt whether those provisions are still valid, e.g., §555 requiring the forfeit of $5 per day for failure to deliver a writ, §4603 establishing a fee of 50 cents for the filing of a certificate and §2623, allowing imprisonment of a debtor. Title 14 may be appropriate for a future recodification/revision with input from those with expertise in the area, such as practicing attorneys or the Judiciary.

We have now finished, to the extent allowed in the Revisor's Report, making the following thirty-two Titles gender-neutral: Titles 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9-A, 9-B, 10, 12, 13, 13-B, 13-C, 15, 16, 17, 17-A, 20-A, 21-A, 22, 24, 24-A, 25, 26, 29-A, 34-B, 35-A, 36, 37-B and 38.

Please feel free to contact me if you have any questions or concerns about any of the corrections included in this report. I would be pleased to review the report with the members of the committee should you wish me to do so.

Sincerely,

Edward A. Charbonneau
Revisor of Statutes

Sec. A-38. 9-A MRSA §2-503, as repealed and replaced by PL 1975, c. 464, is corrected to read:

§2-503. Deferral charges

As used in this section and in section 2-510, unless the context otherwise indicates, the following terms applying with respect to a precomputed consumer credit transaction ~~shall~~ have the following meanings:

1. Computational period. "Computational period" means the interval between scheduled due dates of ~~instalments~~ installments under the transaction if the intervals are substantially equal, or if the intervals are not substantially equal, one month if the smallest interval between the scheduled due dates of ~~instalments~~ installments under the transaction is one month or more, and otherwise one week.

2. Deferral. "Deferral" means a postponement of the scheduled due date of an ~~instalment~~ installment as originally scheduled or as previously deferred.

3. Deferral period. "Deferral period" means a period in which no ~~instalment~~ installment is scheduled to be paid by reason of a deferral.

4. Interval. The "interval" between specified dates means the interval between them including one or the other but not both of them; if the interval between the date of a transaction and the due date of the first scheduled ~~instalment~~ installment does not exceed one month by more than 15 days when the computational period is one month, or does not exceed 11 days when the computational period is one week, the interval may be considered by the creditor as one computational period.

5. Periodic balance. "Periodic balance" means the amount scheduled to be outstanding on the last day of a computational period before deducting the ~~instalment~~ installment, if any, scheduled to be paid on that day.

6. Standard deferral. "Standard deferral" means a deferral with respect to a transaction made as of the due date of an ~~instalment~~ installment as scheduled before the deferral by which the due dates of that ~~instalment~~ installment and all subsequent ~~instalments~~ installments as scheduled before the deferral are deferred for a period equal to the deferral period. A standard deferral may be for one or more full computational periods or a portion of one computational period or a combination of any of these.

7. Sum of the balances method. "Sum of the balances method," also known as the "Rule of 78," means a method employed with respect to a transaction to determine the portion of the finance charge attributable to a period of time before the scheduled due date of the final ~~instalment~~ installment of the transaction. The amount so attributable is determined by multiplying the finance charge by a fraction, the numerator of which is the sum of the periodic balances included within the period and the denominator of which is the sum of all periodic balances under the transaction. According to the sum of the balances method, the portion of the finance charge attributable to a specified computational period is the difference between the portions of the finance charge attributable to the period of time including and excluding, respectively, the computational period, both determined according to the sum of the balances method.

8. Transaction. "Transaction" means a precomputed consumer credit transaction, unless the context otherwise requires.

9. Agreement to a deferral. Before or after default in payment of a scheduled ~~instalment~~ installment of a transaction, the parties to the transaction may agree in writing to a deferral of all or part of one or more unpaid ~~instalments~~ installments and the creditor may make at the time of deferral and receive at that time or at any time thereafter a deferral charge not exceeding that provided in this section.

10. Standard deferral. A standard deferral may be made with respect to a transaction as of the due date, as originally scheduled or as deferred pursuant to a standard deferral, of an ~~instalment~~ installment with respect to which no delinquency charge, section 2-502, has been made or, if made, is deducted from the deferral charge computed according to this subsection. The deferral charge for a standard deferral may equal but not exceed the portion of the finance charge attributable to the computational period immediately preceding the due date of the earliest maturing ~~instalment~~ installment deferred as determined according to the sum of the balances method multiplied by the whole or fractional number of computational periods in the deferral period, counting each day as 1/30th of a month without regard to differences in lengths of months when the computational period is one month or as 1/7th of a week when the computational period is one week. A deferral charge computed according to this subsection is earned pro rata during the deferral period and is fully earned on the last day of the deferral period.

11. Deferral charge other than a standard deferral charge. With respect to a transaction as to which a creditor elects not to make and does not make a standard deferral or a deferral charge for a standard deferral, a deferral charge computed according to this subsection may be made as of the due date, as scheduled originally or as deferred pursuant to either subsection 10 or this subsection, of an ~~instalment~~ installment with respect to which no delinquency charge, section 2-502, has been made or, if made, is deducted from the deferral charge computed according to this subsection. A deferral charge pursuant to this subsection may equal but not exceed the rate of finance charge required to be disclosed to the consumer pursuant to law applied to each amount deferred for the period for which it is deferred computed without regard to differences in lengths of months, but proportionately for a part of a month, counting each day as 1/30th of a month or as ~~1/7~~ 1/7th of a week. A deferral charge computed according to this subsection is earned pro rata with respect to each amount deferred during the period for which it is deferred.

12. Additional charges. In addition to the deferral charge permitted by this section, a creditor may make and receive appropriate additional charges, section 2-501, and any amount of these charges which is not paid may be added to the deferral charge computed according to subsection 10 or to the amount deferred for the purpose of computing the deferral charge computed according to subsection 11.

13. Unilateral grant of deferral by creditor. The parties may agree in writing at the time of a transaction that, if an ~~instalment~~ installment is not paid within 10 days after its due date, the creditor may unilaterally grant a deferral and make charges as provided in this section. A deferral charge may not be made for a period after the date that the creditor elects to accelerate the maturity of the transaction.
