STATE OF MAINE.

BANKING DEPARTMENT.

AUGUSTA, December 1, 1908.

To the Honorable William T. Cobb, Governor, and the Executive Council of the State of Maine:

I have the honor to present herewith my annual report as bank examiner of the State of Maine, for the year ending November 30, 1908, with comments on the general banking situation, and recommendations pertaining thereto.

There were at the close of the year, one hundred and twenty-seven institutions actually doing business under the supervision of this department, a gain of one over the preceding year. Their total assets on the last Saturday of October amounted to $140,635,861.37, being $4,257,548.58 greater than on the corresponding date of 1907, which is the smallest increase shown in any year since 1898, but did not reach the low level of that or of the preceding five years. These assets were distributed among the several institutions as follows:

52	Savings Banks	$93,783,722 78
40	Trust and Banking Companies	42,982,996 32
35	Loan and Building Associations	3,869,142 27
127	Total	$140,635,861 37

The total assets of each class of these institutions for each year beginning with 1890, with the total gain over the preceding year, is shown in the following table:

Total	$90,520,430 11

The total increase in savings deposits, including accumulated capital of the loan and building associations, has been $2,477,-688.63, whereas in 1907 it was $7,224,955.22. This is somewhat less than the decrease in total relative gains of assets and indicates that the savings departments have more than held their own in comparison with the commercial departments. If the figures for the national banks were obtainable, it is probable that the showing would be even more favorable to the savings depositors.

NATIONAL BANKS.

No adequate basis for a general review of the banking situation of the State would be afforded without a summary of the condition of the national banks, and for that reason I give herewith a condensed statement of their resources and liabilities as of the nearest date for which the figures are available, November 27, 1908.

The combined figures of State institutions and of the national banks located in this State, show total resources of $196,278,738.60. This shows a net gain over the preceding year of $4,424,196.22 against a gain during the previous year of $9,520,220.76.

To what extent deposits are duplicated in items due to other national banks, to state banks and bankers, and to trust companies and savings banks, cannot be accurately told. So far as these items represent institutions out of the state they are not reckoned twice. For purposes of comparison, however, it makes little difference because the several items are included in the amounts for both years.

The national banks of the State have for several years been bidding for savings deposits. The amount carried by them as such should be added to the figures of the state institutions in order to ascertain the full amount of savings deposits in the State. This cannot be done under the system of national bank reports hitherto in vogue. It is understood, however, that in future reports these deposits will be classified separately. In that event a more satisfactory idea of the magnitude of this class of banking in the state may be had. If the State devises a method of taxing these deposits in the national banks, the figures on which such tax is based will necessarily produce a division into classes.

This department is under obligation to the Comptroller of the Currency for prompt and courteous attention given all requests for information.

This shows an increase in deposits of only $748,963.34 against $2,704,466.32 for the preceding year, when the recent financial disturbance had just begun to be felt. The percentage of gain this year has been .88 as compared with 3.3 for 1907. A gratifying trend of recovery is, however, shown by the fact that the increase for the last six months of the year was $629,-209.27, while that of the first half-year was but $119,754.07. With a continuance of normal conditions there is good reason to expect an early return to the average increase of the past few years.

This shows a marked decrease in the estimated value of resources above liabilities due to the increased rates of interest paid on all classes of investments and the consequent marking down of the investment value of individual securities. As the normal interest rate varies the investment value and the market value of any given security fluctuates. If the former change is due to a permanent change of conditions, or one which promises to continue for a long period of time, both the investment and the market values are materially influenced thereby. If it is due to temporary conditions, the value of a long-time investment is not seriously affected. It is not easy to separate the two and to say to what extent abnormal conditions may be disregarded in fixing these values. Justice, not only to the institutions themselves, but to the public which must judge the institutions very largely from the official reports, demands that in times when conditions are unsettled a serious effort should be made to distinguish between values for investment purposes and those for purposes purely speculative or fixed by the necessities of individuals.

The department undertook to make this distinction in fixing the valuations at the beginning of the year. It recognized the growing and apparently fixed demand for a rate of income higher than that which had previously prevailed and reduced the valuations accordingly. This accounts for the decrease shown in the table given above. It declined to adopt the so-called market values fixed by the panic of 1907, for the reasons fully given in the last annual report, claiming that they were only temporary, fixed by the exigencies of those who were situated differently from such institutions as our savings banks, and did not reflect the true value of the securities as investments. Developments of the past twelve months and the steady rise in market values appear to have fully vindicated this action.

At first thought it might seem that this whole matter of differentiation in values was of little importance. But when we consider that savings banks are not private institutions, that they are purely mutual and the property of the depositors and of the public,—so much so, in fact, that the entire assessment on the deposits for the expense of maintenance is less than one-fourth of one per cent per annum,—that any disturbance of their affairs results in direct loss to the depositors, and the depositors alone,—and no business is so sensitive to the slightest word of criticism as the banking business—when these facts are considered the importance of the subject becomes very real. And the banks and their depositors are under obligation to those who mould public opinion, and particularly to the press of the State, for the support given them during the recent panic, a condition which is bound to recur at intervals. In fact, I believe that no criticism has been made except under circumstances that impel me to the belief that it was not actuated by a disinterested concern for the welfare of the institutions themselves.

It is gratifying to observe that even with the lower values given the securities, the surplus remains largely above the book surplus claimed by the banks themselves, and amply demonstrates their strength and conservatism.

DIVIDENDS.

The rates and amounts of dividends paid during the past year, as compared with those of 1907, are as follows:

1907.		RATE OF DIVIDEND.	1908.
Number of banks.	Amount of dividends.		Number of banks.	Amount of dividends.
9	$1,375,196 79	4 per cent paid by	36	$2,745,370 20
18	1,005,432 18	3½ per cent paid by	2	41,202 15
18	544,589 95	3½ per cent paid by	13	407,255 33
4	51,540 33	3½ per cent paid by	—	—
3	56,890 68	3 per cent paid by	1	22,124 56
52	$3,033,649 93	3.66 average rate, 1907 3.92 average rate, 1908	52	$3,215,952 24

This rate is materially higher than that paid in 1907, or in either of the past ten years, as shown by the following table:

	1899	1900	1901	1902	1903	1904	1905	1906	1907	1908
4% paid by.....	7	5	5	2	2	2	1	2	9	36

2% paid by.....	—	1	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Total number.....	51	51	51	51	51	51	51	51	52	52
Average rate.....	3.48	3.36	3.30	3.26	3.24	3.28	3.41	3.51	3.66	3.92

It is not probable that this comparatively high rate can be maintained for any considerable period of time. The extraordinary business activity of the past few years with its larger returns for money at interest, and the unusual competition that has prevailed among different banking institutions of the same and of different classes, have contributed materially to the above result.

When we consider, however, that it costs one-fourth of one per cent. of the deposits to pay the running expenses, that the State tax exceeds one-half of one per cent., that four per cent municipal bonds command a premium and that first class railroad and industrial bonds usually cannot be had at a figure that will net above that rate, no extended argument is required to demonstrate that the savings banks cannot be expected to maintain an average dividend rate of 3.92 per cent. without going outside of the class of investments in which trust funds should be placed. An adherence to a rate consistent with these facts should, and I believe will, when understood, commend itself to the thinking public.

Every mutual savings institution should pay its depositors, for the time being, what it earns after carrying a proper amount to its reserve. But none should undertake to increase these earnings at the expense of absolute safety. Periods of financial depression have come and will come again. They will invariably leave their wrecks in the business world. All persons and all institutions doing an extended business must expect to find some of this wreckage on their hands. It would require more than human wisdom to avoid it altogether. There are, perhaps, no infallible signs which will indicate the weaker among the higher classes of investments. But it should not be forgotten that usually the higher the rate of interest offered the greater the risk, and banking institutions should be very careful in assuming risks. None of them are so large or so strong that they may not be affected thereby, and the larger institutions with their larger individual investments are in no less danger of serious losses if care and caution are not exercised.

With other classes of banks actively competing for savings deposits, the temptation for savings banks to undertake to meet the competition is great. But it should not be forgotten that their function differs widely from that of commercial banks. They are intended to constitute a system for the safe investment of the deposits of those who are not so situated as to invest their own funds. They are the property solely of their depositors. It matters not whether they are large or small, each has its special field to serve. If each serves that field with care and fidelity to the trust imposed in its officers it does its full duty. It is chartered because there appears to be a demand for it in its own community. It is not responsible for the welfare of any other community. It has no business actively to invade any other community if already conveniently served. And this is true of other banks as well. The ultimate welfare of the entire savings bank system depends upon the welfare of the individual banks constituting the system. They can continue successful as a whole only so long as all of the individuals continue successful. Disaster visited upon the few will bring want of confidence, and consequent disaster to the many. It can be avoided only as there continues to exist an unselfish regard in each for the welfare of all. There is no call for competition among them. There is no place for it. It should not be tolerated.

I am strongly of the opinion that savings banks should not seek deposits by individual advertising. The Savings Bank Association of the State might properly maintain a system of educational advertising that would be beneficial to the public by keeping before it the advantages offered by the system and the blessing of habits of thrift and saving. Individual banks may properly do this as long as they do not try to build themselves up by creating a belief that others are weaker or otherwise less worthy of patronage. But when one institution undertakes to exploit its claims over that of others it necessarily engenders a spirit of competition that is too likely to lead to undesirable investments for the sake of greater dividends. The same class of investments in one bank will give substantially the same returns as in another. It is, generally speaking, only as one bank takes greater risks that it is able to pay materially greater dividends.

Much credit is due those institutions which insist on absolute care in placing their investments, even at the expense of failure to increase their deposits. It is much better that any bank should see its funds gradually withdrawn dollar by dollar, than that it should ultimately find itself in a position where it cannot meet its legitimate demands. On the other hand, much injury will be done the public, if, by a persistent invasion of fields they were not intended to seek, some of the larger banks so deplete the deposits of the smaller that the latter are driven out of existence. Because the minute the smaller depositor is deprived of a conveniently accessible place of deposit he ceases to be a depositor. The person who deposits his small savings at frequent intervals, and for whom the system is primarily intended, will not send them abroad unless he does so through a postal savings system. The elimination of the smaller banks by this system of competition, if it comes,—and that is its only logical result if persisted in,—means finally a few large banks for large depositors, and no further excuse for a low rate of taxation.

The result is so apparent that its mere mention ought to lead to co-operation rather than competition. If commercial banks are bound to compete, let them do so. There are many people who prefer a mutual savings bank system. They will continue to prefer it unless deprived of convenient access, or turned away by unseemly rivalry among them. When there ceases to be a demand for the system the sole reason for its existence ceases. Until then the one ambition of each should be to faithfully execute the trusts devolving upon it without hindrance to others.

It is not unusual to hear the dividend rate of Maine savings banks compared with that of other states, and this is but natural. Not long ago a financial paper of New England criticised our laws regulating investments because they did not permit our banks to pay as high a dividend as those of another New England state. I feel that there may be interest in a comparison of the important items of earnings, dividends and disbursements of the Maine banks with those of some of our sister states.

The figures for the other states for 1908 are not all available, and I have therefore selected for comparison those of 1907, so that all may be on the same basis. I have not taken the actual rates of dividends as figured on the exact amounts of deposits on which they were paid, because these were not all available, but for the purpose of comparison have taken the total dividends paid and reckoned the percentage on the total deposits at the close of the year. For Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Connecticut, I reach the following result in percentages:

	Maine	N. H.	Mass.	Conn.
Income to deposits.....	5.11	5.40	4.80	4.90
Dividend to deposits.....	3.55	3.24	3.59	3.68
State tax to deposits.....	.54	.52	.26	.21
Expense to deposits.....	.23	.25	.25	.24
Expense to income.....	4.50	4.75	5.26	4.97

If these dividends were figured only on the sums on which dividends were actually paid, the percentage would in all cases be somewhat higher. The actual rate in Maine, for instance, was 3.66. For the purpose of comparison, however, the foregoing is substantially correct. It shows that if the additional State tax paid by the Maine banks was available for dividend purposes, their showing would be the best of the four states named.

INVESTMENTS.

Each year convinces me more strongly that the welfare of these institutions depends much more on individual administration than on legislation. While the State can enact wholesome regulations fixing classes of investments, no class can be specified which will not permit the purchase of weak securities, if the local managing board fails to exercise careful discrimination, and few classes can be eliminated which would not afford desirable individual subjects of investment. It may be that further restrictions might be properly enacted limiting the amount of any single investment that a bank should make, but I am strongly of the opinion that the banks should enjoy all reasonable latitude, because it not only affords a wider range from which to select the best, but the narrower the restrictions the greater the tendency to place a fictitious selling value on the bonds of those classes which are legalized.

The Legislature of 1907 made an attempt to correct some of the inconsistencies which existed in the laws governing this subject, and I think it has worked well. No general revision of the laws should be undertaken except on a scientific consideration of the subject, and when this is undertaken valuable assistance could be secured from the committees of the Savings Bank Association. I am, however, of the opinion that the list of states whose municipal bonds could be purchased might be materially increased without any risk and greatly to the advantage of the banks.

One serious difficulty is encountered in the working out of the statute governing the bonds of street railroads. After defining the requirements to make them a legal investment, the law provides that compliance with these requirements shall be "evidenced by a certificate of the railroad commissioners of the state where the road is located," etc., provided, "that in such of the above states as have no railroad commissioners having supervision of street railroads the bank examiner of this state may ascertain the facts." This State has no power to compel the railroad commissioners of another state to act and the bank examiner now has no power to act where there are such railroad commissioners. The result is that in some of the states whose street railroads offer the most desirable investments the commissioners either decline to act, or furnish a statement which is in fact no certificate at all, and the statute practically shuts out many of the most attractive bonds of the general class which it legalizes. Some official of this State should be given power to act in all cases.

There is another provision of the statute which legalizes the bonds of certain corporations of this State, "which are earning and paying a regular dividend of not less than five per cent. a year." Literally construed, this means five per cent. on its entire capital stock. If a corporation is financed almost entirely on capital stock paid in with a small bond issue, or if it follows the policy of putting a substantial part of its earnings into the betterment of its property, it would be more difficult for it to meet the requirements of the law than for one equipped chiefly from its bonded debt with a relatively small paid-in capital stock. And still it is clear that the latter would fall far short of offering the greater security for its obligations. It would seem that this dividend requirement might safely be fixed on some basis proportionate to its bonded debt, as in the case of street railroads, or at least that in determining the amount of dividends paid, credit might be given for actual earnings carried to a surplus account or expended in betterment and additions, because it certainly cannot be said that a corporation by paying out its earnings in dividends strengthens itself beyond one which puts them back into the plant.

It has been suggested that the law which requires that all investments shall be carried "on the books of the bank at their cost to the bank, or at par when a premium is paid" should be so amended as to except stocks purchased above par. The purpose of the present law as applied to bonds and other investments of a fixed maturity is obvious, but it is not exactly clear why this rule should apply to those evidences of property which are expected to endure permanently.

EXAMINATIONS.

The duty of examining and verifying the accounts of the savings banks is shared by the State banking department and the trustees of the individual institutions. The department is required annually to examine all of the institutions under its supervision. There are now one hundred and twenty-seven of them. This examination consists of a careful listing of all securities, notes and other evidences of property and a general checking up of the books of the bank. Obviously there can be no verification of pass books because they are in the hands of the depositors. There can be little auditing of profits because these consist of innumerable items whose careful verification would require a force many times as large as that now authorized by law. To check up every item of this sort in some of the larger banks would in fact require the almost constant presence of an auditor representing this department.

In those banks which employ two or more persons, each or all of whom receive and compare deposit books as they are presented, there is a constant check on each other that furnishes a substantial audit of the deposit account. In the smaller institutions I recommend that the trustees semi-annually, when dividends are payable, and at least once a year in addition, at a time selected by them without arrangement with the treasurer, provide a person, or take turns among themselves, for a few days to examine and compare with the ledger every pass book as it is presented. While not all such books would come in, it could not be known which ones would be presented and such a system would furnish a very substantial audit of this account.

This department is preparing for use in the future, an additional blank for a detailed statement of receipts and disbursements to form a part of the semi-annual reports now received, which will make it possible to ascertain with substantial accuracy whether all earnings are properly credited. Forms for these reports will be seasonably furnished so as to cause no unnecessary inconvenience to the banks in adjusting themselves to the additional requirements.

Some of the banks now have an audit of profits. I think that it would not be difficult for all boards of trustees to devise some method whereby they could obtain, without great expense to the bank, a substantial verification of these items. I recommend that those who have not already provided for it give the matter careful consideration.

TRUST COMPANIES.

There were on November 30th, forty trust companies doing business in the State. This was an increase of one over the preceding year, the Lubec Trust and Banking Company having organized and begun business under the Act of 1907, the first to organize under the general law. Its capital stock is $25,000, and further details as to its condition appear in the appropriate places in the detailed reports hereinafter given.

The Paris Trust Company, located at South Paris, was organized under the charter granted by the last Legislature, but did not begin business during the time covered by this report and its work is not included in any of the figures herein given.

A comparative detailed statement of the liabilities and resources of the trust companies as they existed on the last Saturday of October and on the corresponding date of 1907, follows:

These institutions are now doing a very substantial part of the banking business of the State. Their resources are nearly 80 per cent. of those of the national banks and approximately one-half of those of the savings banks. They have a surplus equal to 59 per cent. of their capital stock while the national banks have but 37 per cent. Their deposits are substantially equal to those of the national banks.

The foregoing table shows an increase of almost one per cent in the average rate of dividends on capital stock, but in figuring the average rate of dividends for 1907, account was taken of six new companies with capital stock of $260,000, which had not had time to declare regular dividends, against one company capitalized at $25,000 in 1908.

The average rate of such dividends, 8.06, appears at first glance large. It must be remembered, however, that it is reckoned on capital stock alone, while the real capitalization on which stockholders are entitled to consideration includes surplus and undivided profits, and a large part of the surplus has been actually paid in, many original stockholders paying 150 and 200 for their stock. The stockholders are not, therefore, receiving an unreasonable return from their investment, especially when it is considered that they are subject to a double liability in case of loss and that the stock in the hands of private owners is subject to full municipal tax.

TAX ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS.

These institutions paid a state tax of $87,351.26. The savings banks paid $470,815.26. The national banks, openly and aggressively competing for the same class of business, paid the State nothing. This leads to the consideration of a subject of vital importance to the State and to those interested in state institutions. Every dollar of savings deposits which is thus drawn away from the state institutions is at the same time practically denied to the State as a source of revenue, and with no benefit to the depositors themselves, because the rate of interest paid by the national banks will not average higher than that paid by the state banking institutions in the same community. The advantage is solely to the stockholders.

There is no apparent reason why the same class of deposits should not bear the same burdens. The state of New Hampshire undertook to solve this problem by invoking a state law which forbade doing a savings bank business by any person or corporation not especially authorized by law, first securing a statement from Washington that this business was not recognized under the national bank act. The court held, however, that the receipt of deposits on an agreement to pay a specified rate of interest did not constitute a savings bank business, the latter being purely mutual and leaving the rate of dividend indefinite and subject to earnings.

Vermont, on the other hand, has devised a scheme for taxing the individual depositors in national banks at the same rate imposed upon similar deposits in state institutions, giving the bank the option of paying the tax itself. This seems entirely equitable, and I understand that it has worked satisfactorily. I cannot see why there should be objection to the enactment of such a law in this State.

There are thirty-five loan and building associations doing business in the State. This number has continued the same since 1903. Their growth during the past twenty years is shown in the following table:

They have at the same time made a substantial increase in undivided profits, the net gain being $3,461.46, accompanied by a substantial decrease in the item of permanent expense, and all accomplished with a slight increase in the average rate of dividends paid. All of which goes to demonstrate the continued soundness and desirability of these institutions for both investing and borrowing members.

ORGANIZATION OF DEPARTMENT.

The representatives of the national government who come in direct official contact with the national banks in the State are known as bank examiners. With this official designation the same as that of the head of the state banking department, there is constant confusion in the minds of the public when either official is referred to as the "bank examiner." Most of the other states with state banking departments have remedied this by designating the chief of this department as Commissioner or Superintendent, and his chief clerk as Deputy. Those having larger departments call some of their clerks bank examiners. Official communications from these departments are constantly addressed to this department under the term similar to their own official title on the assumption that this State has made the change.

I recommend that section one of our banking laws be so amended that the head of this department may be called the Bank Commissioner, with power to appoint a Deputy Commissioner and necessary clerks. The Deputy will continue to perform the duties now performed by him and the change will entail absolutely no additional expense upon the State.
