SERVICE as a STRATEGY

Maine Commission
for Community Service
2010 Annual Report

2010 Commission Chair's Letter

Greetings!

I am pleased to submit the annual report for calendar year 2010 to Governor Paul R. LePage and the legislature's Joint Standing Committee on State and Local Government as required by the enabling statute of the Maine Commission for Community Service (MCCS).

As expected, 2010 was marked by significant accomplishments and constant change.

- MCCS undertook development of a new three-year strategic plan which built off the accomplishments of the 2006-2009 plan and responded to new realities. It was adopted in June.
- Reports on the status of Maine's volunteer sector, the impact of Maine nonprofit leaders on the success of volunteer programs, and the role of AmeriCorps in attracting young adults to Maine were completed and published.
- As of July, MCCS assumed responsibility for managing service-learning federal grant funds from the Corporation for National and Community Service. The number of grants doubled with support from Time Warner Cable.
- Implementation of new elements of the federal Serve America Act opened up opportunities for supporting Maine's volunteer sector and expanded MCCS program development responsibilities to include Senior Corps as well as AmeriCorps.
- Federal "recovery" funds for VISTA and AmeriCorps*State programs resulted in a brief but significant expansion of AmeriCorps work in Maine communities.
- Through a combination of federal and foundation dollars, MCCS launched three facets of its plan to strengthen Maine's volunteer sector by supporting the people who oversee volunteer programs.

Perhaps the most significant event was the vote of the Commissioners to focus our 2011-2013 grant-making on three areas that impact citizens' ability to work, thrive, and engage in community life:

- Health, particularly levels of physical activity and diabetes prevention;
- High school completion and enrollment in a post-secondary educational program; and
- Strengthening local volunteer programs so they can increase their ability to address local problems.

These choices were made in the context of strategic planning by our federal government partner, the Corporation for National and Community Service. The focus areas in the federal arena – healthy futures, education, economic opportunity, veterans, environmental stewardship and energy, disaster preparedness – will provide additional opportunities to direct resources into local volunteer programs that address issues beyond the MCCS priorities.

We hope this annual summary of results and overview of major activities will provide some insight into the complex work of the Commission. We welcome requests for additional information and look forward to an even busier 2011.

Sincerely,

Mary-Anne LaMarre
Chair, Maine Commission for Community Service

Commissioners and Staff

Introduction

The Maine Commission for Community Service was established in 1994 by Executive Order and under state statute in 1995 (5MRSac375§7501). The 25-member Commission is Maine's partner for the Corporation for National Service, a federal agency that provides funding to states to increase citizen volunteer service in communities.

Advancing Volunteerism Strengthening Communities

What We Do

The Maine Commission for Community Service builds capacity and sustainability in Maine's volunteer and service communities by funding programs, developing managers of volunteers and service-learning practitioners, raising awareness of sector issues, and promoting service as a strategy.

Promoting Service as a Strategy

- Expands opportunities for Maine citizens to access financial aid for post-secondary education through service
- Targets National Service funds at critical issues
- Demonstrates impact of volunteerism through Days of Service
- Promotes service-learning as a research based strategy for dropout prevention

Funding Service Programs to Address Critical Issues

- AmeriCorps
- Learn & Serve
- Volunteer Centers

Raising Awareness of Sector Issues

- Over $1.1 billion annual in-kind labor
- "Maine Volunteer Sector Status" report
- Researches issues and monitors trends
- Educates public and nonprofit leaders about Maine's volunteer sector

Developing Managers of Volunteers and Service-Learning Practitioners

- Trains National Service grantees
- Cost-shares tuition for college courses on volunteer management
- Manages VolunteerMaine.org
- Fosters peer advising through regional networks and conferences

Commission Federal Funding

- AmeriCorps*State grant administration: $1.1 million from the Corporation for National and Community Service (CNCS) to support 180 member positions with education awards. 100% was passed through to grantees.
- "Learn & Serve" grant administration: $80,177 in federal dollars from CNCS and $35,000 from Time Warner Cable. 53% was passed through as grants. The balance supports technical assistance and grant administration.
- Maine HEARTH: $49,970 in federal funds from Hands on Network. 82% was passed through to community organizations.
- VISTA Project: Supported by a $30,000 grant from CNCS for supervision. MCCC recruited and placed 28 AmeriCorps*VISTAs in 23 organizations across the state.
- Challenge Grant: $53,000 in federal funds was received. 88% was passed through to Maine higher education institutional partners.
- CNCS awarded MCCC $387,223 in the form of Administration, Program Development and Training, and Disability inclusion grants.

Funding Service Programs

Volunteer Generation Fund

The Volunteer Generation Fund, a new program authorized by the Edward M. Kennedy Serve America Act, is designed to increase the number of people who serve in meaningful volunteer roles dedicated to addressing important needs in communities across America.

The Fund supports efforts that expand the capacity of volunteer centers to recruit, manage, support and retain individuals to serve in high quality volunteer assignments. Funding was made to State Commissions through the Corporation for National and Community Service on a competitive basis. The Maine Commission for Community Service (MCCS) was one of only 19 states to receive funds in the first year of the grant program.

Across the nation a total of $4,000,000 in Volunteer Generation Funds has been awarded. Maine received $300,000 and was ranked in the top ten recipients for amount of funding received. MCCS anticipates granting $198,000 to establish and support regional volunteer centers and peer networks for managers of volunteers. $10,000 will support training and scholarships for professional development of managers of volunteers. In addition, $7,800 will be set aside for statewide promotion of volunteerism. The total local match leveraged will be $89,000.

Maine HEARTH Grant

The Maine Commission for Community Service received $49,970 in grant funds to support the Maine HEARTH Program. This program coordinated planning and networking around community heating needs and increased the visibility of heating assistance sources. It supported the formation and increased the capacity of existing local response teams in 12 counties. These funds fueled a tangible and compelling response to the call for service and extended volunteerism and volunteer leader capacity to solve one of Maine's most pressing needs: to keep citizens safe and warm in their homes. Five American Reinvestment and Recovery Act AmeriCorps*VISTAS served with Maine HEARTH partners. Major accomplishments of the 2010 project include:

- 261 volunteers were engaged in Maine HEARTH activities
- 2,627 hours were served by volunteers
- 29 volunteers served as team leaders to coordinate other volunteers
- 35 professional volunteers donated their services
- 242 window panels were installed which resulted in $9,000 of energy savings in one county alone
- 400 hours of energy conservation education and volunteer training were delivered
- 100 homes in the state were weatherized

Governor's Awards for Service and Volunteerism

For the past 24 years, the Governor's Awards for Service and Volunteerism have celebrated and recognized the exemplary work of Maine's volunteers by shining a light on the impact of volunteerism on Maine Communities. This award program is administered for the Governor's Office by the Maine Commission for Community Service. Governor Baldacci was joined at the Hall of Flags Ceremony by business and civic leaders, professionals, as well as lawmakers from across the state, to recognize hundreds of citizens.

The 2010 Volunteer of the Year was Eileen Danforth (pictured above). UNUM received the Corporate Volunteerism Award. More than 150 people attended the Hall of Flags ceremony where 15 volunteers were recognized for their service.

At the Roll Of Honor Ceremony, 778 volunteers from across the state were named to the Roll of Honor. They contributed more than 774,206 hours of service in 2010! Visit VolunteerMaine.org to see a full list of winners.

Blaine House Conference on Volunteerism

In its 24th year, the conference had 291 registrants and focused on current best practices for Maine's volunteers and managers of volunteers. Conference participants gave high marks to the value of content for both their program and their agencies (3.45 score out of 4). The topics ranged from engaging Boomers, volunteer recruitment and management strategies, to working with youth and drawing connections between volunteer service and life-long learning.

Martin Luther King, Jr. Day of Service

The Commission was pleased to provide a record number of $500 awards, 16 in total, to fund community service projects across the state that honor Dr.

King and his legacy. Projects addressed such community needs as hunger, diversity education, and literacy. More than 360 volunteers donated 1,300 hours of service in honor of Martin Luther King, Jr. More than $4,500 in matching funds were contributed by local organizations.

Volunteers in Action Photo Contest

"Helping a Farmer in Need" was taken by Jon Ljunggren of Vienna. Firefighters from three towns (Wayne, Mt. Vernon and Readfield) worked together at the Mt. Vernon scene.

2006-2009 Strategic Plan Report

The end of 2009 marked the closing of the Maine Commission for Community Service's third strategic plan. Like its predecessors, the plan covered three years as required by law. The plan fills two functions. It is the statutorily required comprehensive state service plan and it sets the parameters for Commission grant-making, technical assistance, and initiatives. The outline below reports the degree to which targets set in the 2006-2009 MCCS strategic plan outcomes were achieved.

GOAL 1: MAINE CITIZENS WILL VOLUNTEER AT RATES SUFFICIENT TO ADDRESS LOCAL HUMAN AND ENVIRONMENTAL NEEDS.

Objective 1a: By 2009, at least 35% of Maine adults will devote time outside regular family and work responsibilities to either community service or civic activities.

Measure: % of Maine adults reported they have devoted time outside of regular family and work schedule to a volunteer effort.

Source: "Current Population Survey" annual supplement on volunteering. (US Dept. of Labor, Bureau of Labor Statistics.)

2006 Baseline: 32.9% of Maine adults

2009 Result: 34.4% of Maine adults

Comment: Despite the onset of economic hard times, the number of adults who volunteer grew slightly and Maine did not experience the decline in volunteers that occurred in other parts of the country. More impressive is the fact that the average number of hours each person devoted to volunteering grew from 39.5 annually to 49.3 hours annually, a 25% increase. Maine AmeriCorps members (695 people) contributed to the local civic engagement and volunteering by recruiting 44,786 volunteers to help meet local needs.

Objective 1b: By 2009, no less than 50% of Maine school-aged youth will devote time either to community service, civic activities, or community-based service learning.

Measure: % of high school aged youth that reported spending time doing community volunteer activities.

Source: For 2006, Indicator #71 in Maine Marks (www.mainemarks.org). This indicator was eliminated in subsequent reports. For 2009, MCCS added questions to a statewide survey.

2006 Baseline: 48% of high school aged youth devoted 3-4 hours to these activities monthly.

2009 Result: 41% volunteered an average of 2 hours each month.

Comment: National polling has been following the overall rate of volunteering among older teens for over 20 years. The rate of volunteering among older teenagers was found to be almost ten percentage points higher than it was in 1989. This is significant in light of research that shows a “habit” of volunteering formed during or before teen years continues through adulthood. Service to others is also a fundamental element in healthy development as demonstrated by Search Institutes’ 40 Developmental Assets which recommends at least one hour per week for 12-18 year olds.

GOAL 2: MAINE VOLUNTEER PROGRAMS WILL ACHIEVE THE MAXIMUM POSSIBLE IMPACT ON COMMUNITY NEEDS THROUGH HIGH QUALITY, SUSTAINABLE SERVICE.

Objective 2a: By 2009, the percent of Maine volunteer programs that implement 90% of the 22 essential volunteer management practices in their operations will increase from 23% to 45%.

Measure: % of programs that report “always” or “sometimes” using each essential management practice.

Source: MCCS Survey of Community and Volunteer Programs.

2006 Baseline: 23% of programs reported “always” or “sometimes” using the essential practices.

2009 Result: 42% of programs reported “always” or “sometimes” using the essential practices.

Comment: The essential volunteer management practices are a predictor of a volunteer program’s ability to thrive, expand, and impact community issues. National research consistently finds that over a third of people who are first time volunteers leave service after one year because of program management issues and do not volunteer again, even with another program. This attrition is costly in many ways including the lack of engagement among those who “drop out” of volunteering.

Maine’s volunteer attrition rate is beginning to drop: 31% compared to 35% nationally. An area of concern relates to negative changes on several specific management practices that connect Maine programs with the mission and services of their agencies:

- a 15% decline between 2006 and 2009 in the number of programs reporting that volunteer activity relates to organizational or program goals for outcomes.
- an 8% drop in record keeping about the contributions of volunteers to an organization.
- an 8% decline in the number of organizations that reported their outcomes and volunteer levels of effort to the governing board and stakeholders.
- inclusion of the volunteer manager in organizational planning activities dropped by 12%.

When viewed in conjunction with the MCCS survey of nonprofit CEOs about their knowledge and support of internal volunteer programs, there is evidence that volunteer programs are not being leveraged to maximize agencies’ services to their communities.

Objective 2b: By 2009, 85% of volunteer program managers will know if their job descriptions reflect the core competencies for their profession and 100% will report that their official duties explicitly include volunteer management.

Measures: % of volunteer program managers that report their job descriptions reflect core competencies for managers of volunteers; and, % of volunteer program managers who report their official duties explicitly include volunteer management.

Source: MCCS Survey of Community and Volunteer Programs.

2006 Baseline: 12% of volunteer managers explicitly have as an official duty volunteer management; 73% of those volunteer program managers have job descriptions based on core competencies.

2009 Result: 67% of volunteer managers explicitly have volunteer management as an official duty; 36% of those volunteer program managers have job descriptions based on core competencies.

Comment: In the context of the significant MCCS outreach and education of program staff as well as sponsoring organizations, the targets indicate two things: an increase in the recognition of the need for volunteer management to be a deliberate assignment in a job; and greater clarity among volunteer managers about the link between professional competencies and volunteer management. For three years, MCCS has emphasized the competencies for managers of volunteers in its training, its online educational blog for volunteer staff, its newsletter, its the educational webinar series. The goal has been (and continues to be) to help staff supporting volunteer programs recognize that the job has a specific skill and knowledge base; identify where they are on the continuum of novice through expert practitioner; be able to articulate their needs for training or education and locate sources for that professional development.

Objective 2c: By 2009, 25% of volunteer managers with less than 5 years experience will report they have had at least 16 hours of formal annual training in volunteer administration.

Measure: % of novice (<5 years experience) volunteer managers reporting at least 16 hours annually of formal training in volunteer administration.

Source: MCCS Survey of Community and Volunteer Programs.

2006 Baseline: 5% of volunteer managers with less than 5 years experience had formal training.

2009 Result: 26% of volunteer managers with less than 5 years experience have had at least 16 hours formal training annually.

Comment: In the 2006 survey of Maine volunteer managers, 56% indicated their volunteer management training was informal “on-the-job trial and error.” That prompted MCCS to work diligently to create a broader array of training and professional development options for volunteer managers in Maine. When the survey was repeated for the 2010 strategic plan, the number of volunteer managers who had no formal training for the work had dropped to 37%. Although MCCS manages an educational blog, monthly webinar series, and a statewide conference for managers of volunteers, the goal of accessible professional development for volunteer managers also meant being the catalyst for four new regional peer networks through which volunteer staff can advise and guide each other. In addition, the educational expansion was greatly enhanced with development of four college-level courses (one per skill level) launched by Maine higher education institutions in 2010.

Objective 2d: By 2009, Maine will have the capacity in at least three regions to accept, screen, orient, and deploy volunteers effectively as requested by emergency management personnel.

Measure: Count of teams trained and available to deploy at the request of Maine Emergency Management Agency to operate volunteer reception centers in response to disasters.

2006 Baseline: York County had the capacity to operate a volunteer reception center.

2009 Result: The Maine chapter of AmeriCorps Alums has been added as a team ready to operate a volunteer reception center. In addition, the York County team has merged into the Southern Maine COAD (Community Organizations Active in Disasters), an organization that coordinates response among non-emergency community groups in Cumberland and York Counties.

Comment: The Commission’s role in state responses to disasters has evolved to include co-chairing the Donations Management Team with the Division Director, Preparedness, Recovery and Mitigation at Maine Emergency Management Agency.

Peer to Peer Networks

Peer to Peer Networks bring together managers and staff from volunteer programs to improve their skills and share ideas, successes and challenges. Support to National Service Programs

A major part of the Commission's responsibility is to provide training and technical assistance for Maine's National Service programs. Highlights of work in this area include:

- Convened monthly training and technical assistance meetings of AmeriCorps* State grantees.
- Established quarterly meetings of National Service Staff Council.
- Sponsored National Service Legislative Outreach Day.
- Provided 138 scholarships for National Service Program Staff and members to attend the 2010 Blaine House Conference.
- Conducted outreach to encourage collaboration among community and governmental agencies to develop new AmeriCorps programs.
- Coordinated Maine's participation in AmeriCorps Week and Senior Corps Week.
- Provided webinars on topics related to national service.
- Conducted a statewide conference for AmeriCorps members serving in Maine.
- Provided 15 scholarships to National Service staff and members to participate in UMCE Waldo County "Strengthening Your Facilitation Skills Level 1 and 2."

From the Field

The VolunteerMaine.org Blog

The blog serves as a resource for volunteer managers who want to further develop their knowledge, skills and abilities. The blog provides an online community where volunteer managers can share resources and learn and support one another. The blog's value and impact can be seen in recent survey results:

- 97% of respondents reported the blog provides them with useful information they can apply to their work.
- 87 % rated the overall quality of blog content as “great” or “good.”
- 55% said they considered themselves to be “intermediate level managers of volunteers.” 10% rated themselves as “Novice” and 36% as “Advanced.”
- 81% indicated they felt the blog was written for the “intermediate level manager of volunteers.”

In 2010 the blog had more than 100 posts; averaging 2 posts each week. Blog contributions are made by Guest Bloggers and Featured Bloggers who each post every seven weeks. Featured Bloggers are listed below:

- Michael Aiguier, AmeriCorps VISTA, United Way of Eastern Maine
- Jamie Andrew, Volunteer Coordinator, Children's Museum of Maine
- Trudy Hamilton, Certified Volunteer Administrator
- Penny Kern, Retired Membership Program Manager, Girl Scouts
- Patricia Kimball, Founder, Ideactive Solutions

Webinars

In 2010 MCCA began offering a free interactive webinar series based on the skills, issues and opportunities that affect volunteer programs. In the first year of the series 156 people attended 9 webinars. Topics included:

- What Does It Take To Have a Quality Volunteer Program?
- Baby Boomers, Generation X, and Generation Y as Volunteers.
- Navigating The Seas Of AmeriCorps.
- Why Should I Use VolunteerMaine.org?
- What Is Service-Learning and Why Do It?
- Why People Don't Volunteer: Overcoming The Barriers to Service.
- Making The Most of Your Training: Planning Effective Webinars.
- Weathering The Downturn: Volunteerism During The Recession.
- Universal Design: Expanding Your Volunteer Pool.

Raising Awareness

Volunteering in America Report

The Volunteering in America research is produced annually by the Corporation as part of its efforts to expand the reach and impact of America's volunteers. The research is the most comprehensive data on volunteering ever assembled and it includes data on volunteer rates, rankings, area-specific trends, and analysis. The report is published each summer and is tool used by elected officials and nonprofit leaders to develop strategies to mobilize more Americans in service to address local needs. Data for the report was collected through a supplement to the Current Population Survey, conducted by the U.S. Census Bureau for the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The Volunteer Supplement collects data on the volunteering activities of adults aged 16 and older. For more information visit www.VolunteeringinAmerica.gov.

Maine Highlights

- 366.6 thousand adults in Maine volunteered in 2009.
- The volunteer rate in Maine increased in 2009 to 34.4% from 31.8% in 2008.
- Maine ranked 2nd in New England in terms of the number of volunteers.
- Maine ranked 4th in the nation for volunteer hours per resident.
- Maine volunteers contributed 51.9 million hours of service with an economic contribution valued at $1.1 billion.

Civic Health Assessment

The Civic Health Assessment is designed to gauge the health of America's communities by measuring how often residents engage in a variety of civic activities and to help civic leaders identify ways to strengthen the participation of citizens in their communities. Civic engagement is, in essence, the common thread of participation in and building of one's community. The 2010 report marked the first time that such a comprehensive collection of data is available across these indicators for the nation, states and cities. Data for the assessment was collected through a supplement to the Current Population Survey. More information can be found at www.civic.serve.gov.

Key Findings

- In Maine 70.2% of residents voted in the 2008 Presidential election. This ranks us at number two among the 50 states and Washington, DC in terms of voting rates.
- Participating in a group and/or a voluntary association is considered a strong litmus test for the strength of civic engagement. 38.7% of adults in Maine participated in group or voluntary organization.
- 116,000* Maine residents worked informally with neighbors to fix a community problem.
- Veterans are generally more involved in their communities than non-veterans.
- In general, people who have higher levels of education, are more likely to participate in civic activities.
- 51.4% of Maine residents donated money, assets, or property to charitable or religious organizations.
- Americans are coming together to solve challenges. They are tilting towards the issues and not running away from them. Adults who volunteer are more likely to participate in every other form of civic engagement.

In addition to 366.6 thousand formal volunteers.*

Maine AmeriCorps Service Attracts and Retains Talented Young People

In 2010, the results from six years of AmeriCorps member survey responses were analyzed, to look at the profile of members who come to Maine from out of state. The research revealed that AmeriCorps is not just a means of supporting communities in Maine through significant and essential service; but it also attracts highly educated individuals from out of state and encourages them to stay.

Highlights:

- 41% of the non-residents stayed in Maine after their year of service.
- 67% of non-residents have at least a four year degree.
- 52% of all AmeriCorps members take on volunteer work during their year of service (unrelated to AmeriCorps assignment).
- Before their AmeriCorps service: 18 % seldom volunteered; 52 % regularly volunteered; 28% occasionally volunteered and 1% never volunteered.
- AmeriCorps members started volunteering: 40% before teen, 39% during teen, 13 % as an adult, and 8% as young adult.

mocracy and citizenship, they become actively contributing citizens and community members through service. A national study of Learn and Serve America programs suggests that effective service-learning programs improve grades, increase attendance in school, and develop students' personal and social responsibility. Service-learning strengthens both education and local communities by building effective collaborative partnerships between schools and community organizations that help meet community needs.

Learn & Serve Maine

RSU 67 (Chester, Lincoln and Mattawamkeag)

Contact: Donna J. Vigue, 207.794.6500 or donna.vigue@rsu67.org

Program impact: Students completed 22 service-learning projects which involved 70 community organizations, 994 students and 16 community volunteers. Projects included a public policy project where students identified a community issue with a community partner. Students then worked with that partner to research the issue, explore alternative solutions, and present their own solution publicly.

RSU 34 (Alton, Bradley and Old Town)

Contact: Judith K. Pusey, judy.pusey@rsu34.org or 207.827.3932

Program impact: Students completed 18 service-learning projects which involved 25 community organizations, 400 students and 15 community volunteers. Chemistry students conducted mercury testing in the Sunhaze watershed and presented the findings publicly. Other students created video documentaries to highlight community resources and created a student-staffed writing center.

Service-Learning Mini-Grants

Jay Middle School

Contact: Robert Taylor, robert_taylor@jayschool.org

Project impact: 135 students built a geodesic dome where they will grow produce for the community and school

During the process students learned construction techniques, the use of hand tools, and about renewable energy and solar power. Students have had the opportunity to connect their learning to the “real world” in a very meaningful way.

Youthlinks

Contact: Amie Hutchison, ahutchison@brmaine.org

Project impact: 20 students helped homeless shelter residents get back on their feet by repairing bikes for transportation. The program required participants to look at a bike from the engineering standpoint to figure out why something wasn't working. They also learned the metric system as they worked with various tools.

The New School

Contact: Marylyn Wentworth, thenewschool@tnsk.org

Program impact: 36 students winterized 25 homes of elderly or low-income families. They shrink-wrapped windows, insulated electrical outlets, weather-stripped and windows. Students learned how to conduct an energy audit, the principles of thermo-dynamics and how to button up a drafty home while using math skills for measuring and calculating.

RSU#10 Western Foothills Kids Association

Contact: Allie Burke, aburke@rsu10.org

Program impact: 162 students studied, designed, and built a compost project from the ground up. As part of the project they involved the entire school and are now composting a large percentage of school food waste.

Habitat for Humanity of Greater Portland

Contact: Stefanie Millette, youth@habitatme.org

Project impact: 20 students created architectural plans for affordable housing. Science and engineering principles were employed as students learned about the toxicity of various building materials and their broader effect on the environment.
