Dear Senator Murray and Representative Povich:

During the 118th Regular Session of the Legislature, the Committee on Criminal Justice heard L.D. 753, An Act to Allow Police to Take Intoxicated Persons into Custody. The Committee chose to hold over the bill pending a report from the Office of Substance Abuse. The Committee asked the Office to review existing services for the publicly intoxicated person and to make recommendations regarding the service delivery system for this population. The attached report reviews the process OSA used to address these questions and our recommendations for the future. We appreciate the opportunity to provide this information and look forward to reviewing it and our recommendations with the Committee.

Sincerely,

Lynn F. Duby

REPORT TO THE COMMITTEE ON CRIMINAL JUSTICE
RECOMMENDATIONS REGARDING SERVICES TO PERSONS WHO ARE PUBLICLY INEBRIATED

BACKGROUND: During the first session of the 118th Legislature the Committee on Criminal Justice held a hearing on L.D. 753, An Act to Allow Police to Take Intoxicated Persons into Custody. This legislation would have allowed law enforcement officers to take into custody persons who were publicly inebriated if those persons refused to be transported to a safer place. Primarily, the impetus for this bill was a lawsuit against the city of Westbrook involving a person who was publicly inebriated, refused transport except to a coffee shop and ultimately was fatally injured by an automobile. The family sued the city of Westbrook claiming the police had failed to protect the individual. The insurance company for the city settled out of court. The Committee chose to carry over the bill and asked the Department of Mental Health Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse Service's Office of Substance Abuse to establish a work group to look at four issues and return to the next session with a report. Those four questions were:

1. Development of a complete inventory of existing resources, pointing out strengths and weaknesses.
2. An assessment of how great the problem of public intoxication is in Maine.
3. Recommendations for legislation that will fit within existing resources.
4. Recommendations for enhancing resources (quantitatively, geographically, programmatically, etc.) to appropriately accommodate LD 753 as proposed.

PROCESS: The Office of Substance Abuse called together a group of interested stakeholders consisting of representatives from the Maine Sheriff's Association, the Maine Chief's of Police, the Maine Hospital Association and the Maine Association of Substance Abuse Providers. Individuals from these groups also represented persons in recovery and their families. The group met eight times during the summer and fall of 1997. In order to assess the magnitude of the problem the group developed a survey instrument which was sent to every sheriff and chief of police in the state. Fifty-six sheriffs and chiefs responded to the survey for a return rate of 43 percent. The results of the survey and a copy of the survey are attached to this report (Survey Attachment 1 and Results Attachment 2).

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE RESULTS: As a result of the survey and the numerous discussions group members had with their counterparts across the state several areas were highlighted.

1. The problem of public intoxication, while not involving large numbers of individuals, is widespread, involving both rural and urban areas. Approximately 5283 cases of public inebriation by adults was reported on the survey. Of this number 2436 were repeat offenders or approximately 46 percent.
2. The counties of York, Cumberland, Kennebec, Somerset, Androscoggin and Penobscot account for 80 percent of the reported incidents of adult public intoxication in our survey. These same counties, with the exception of Androscoggin, account for the highest number of repeat offenders.

3. The current service delivery system is not adequate to service these individuals. State funded Detox/shelters are available only in two of the six counties (Cumberland and Penobscot) for a total of 55 beds . In Cumberland, insufficient capacity has resulted in the shelter turning away significant numbers of individuals during the fall months of 1997. Extended shelter is available in Androscoggin , Cumberland and York counties for a total of 35 beds (see Attachment 3 for complete listing).

INVENTORY OR RESOURCES AND SIZE OF THE PROBLEM:

Current treatment resources available to the adult publicly intoxicated population include detoxification services (social and medical), emergency shelter and extended shelter. Total system capacity for the indigent population is 85 beds statewide. Over the course of the last year roughly 238 people were transported to shelters or detoxes upon being picked up by local police. The largest share of persons transported, approximately 742, were transported to their homes. The remaining number were transported to hospitals, the police station or elsewhere. Because some of the largest police departments did not respond to the survey, we believe that even larger numbers were transported to shelters, detoxes and home but it is likely that the proportion among these options will remain relatively the same. While an additional 89 detox beds are available in the system, they are available, generally, to clients who have some source of reimbursement (usually Medicaid, sometimes insurance) not to indigents.

The situation for adolescents is more complicated. Approximately 1833 juvenile offenses came to the attention of police last year due to public inebriation. Of those, 655 were repeat offenders or about 36 percent. The largest proportion of individuals were in Androscoggin, Cumberland and York counties.

Approximately 64 percent of these cases were resolved by returning the juveniles to their parents or guardians. There are currently no shelters for intoxicated adolescents available. Additionally, the question of whether juveniles who come to the attention of police for repeated public intoxication should be considered public inebriates is one which needs to be discussed. Certainly, these adolescents need a different response than do adults.

POSSIBLE RESPONSES WITHIN THE SYSTEM:

There are two potential services which could be used to partly address the issue of the person who is publicly inebriated. Both have drawbacks. The first possibility is the state mental health crisis system. There are approximately 43 such beds around the state. Three of these beds are currently available to persons who are publicly inebriated in Cumberland county. The rest largely exclude this population. In order to allow for the needs of this population a number of changes would have to be made at the facilities, including staff training, some separation from the rest of the population, and some staffing changes. Because utilization of the current beds is so high, additional beds would also be required.

A second option which needs to be pursued is the possibility of utilizing vacant hospital beds to monitor clients in an intoxicated state until an appropriate disposition can be made. Intoxicated individuals are sometimes taken to local hospital emergency rooms, especially in small towns. In the early 1980s a program utilizing volunteers to stay with intoxicated individuals in local emergency rooms was operational in the Kennebec county area. Trained and supervised monitors were on call to stay with intoxicated persons in local hospitals until an accurate evaluation could be done. Empty beds in the hospital were used for this purpose. The Maine Hospital Association has indicated an interest in discussing this option. The current liability climate may require additional protections for the hospitals which were not necessary in the early 80s. Discussions are currently scheduled with the Association for January regarding a model or demonstration program of this kind.

INVOLUNTARY COMMITMENT:

The group also discussed the issue of involuntary commitment. Prior to 1993 there existed in statute an option to involuntarily commit individuals whose substance abuse/addiction had reached a level where they were a danger to themselves. This statute was utilized infrequently, in part because the receiving facility was never defined. Essentially this meant there was no place to commit someone to. There have been several requests to reconsider this option. In 1991 model legislation was developed to create an involuntary commitment law for substance abusers who were a severe and imminent danger to themselves. Although the legislation had broad support in 1991 and again when it was reintroduced in 1994, it did not become law. The current involuntary commitment law, although it mentions substance abuse, outlines a process that does not meet the needs of the substance abusing population. The group believes it would be prudent to set up a study committee, with legislative backing, to look at the issue of involuntary commitment, including definition of the receiving facilities. We propose this committee report back to the 119th Legislature's Criminal Justice Committee.

LIABILITY FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT

The issue of liability for law enforcement officers is one which carries significant importance to municipalities and police departments. Law enforcement officers feel caught between both duty and desire to protect and inability to do so when the intoxicated person refuses assistance. While there is some immunity in current law, there was strong sentiment from the law enforcement representatives of the group, in particular, that more protection is needed. Accordingly, we have recommended language in our attached draft legislation to address this concern.

Additionally, there is a need for more accurate information regarding the size of the problem. While the survey conducted by the group was very helpful, a more consistent way of gathering information on this population is needed. We are therefore recommending that law enforcement be required to add several data elements to the current Uniform Crime Reporting requirements. These data items would be specifically geared to the publicly intoxicated population. This process is similar to one used several years ago to document incidences of domestic violence.

Attachment 4 is a draft of legislation which would implement the recommendations made in the above report. To summarize, the recommendations are:

1. Require law enforcement agencies to keep records of public intoxication and report that information to the Department of Mental Health, Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse Services Office of Substance Abuse.
2. Provide immunity to law enforcement officers in a civil action for failing to provide assistance to a person intoxicated in a public place if the person refuses the law enforcement officer's assistance.
3. Create a study group to look at the issue of involuntary commitment for substance abuse and report back to the 119th session of the Legislature.
