FOREWORD BY MAINE ATTORNEY GENERAL AARON M. FREY

I would like to begin by thanking the dedicated members of the Homicide Review Panel on the 13th Biennial report – A 20 Year Lookback. This retrospective analysis from the last 20 years is informative and encouraging.

As a former legislator and defense attorney and the current Attorney General, I have seen first-hand the impact that people who commit domestic abuse have on their families. I have seen children left parentless because a husband kills his wife and is then arrested and the serial batterer who loses his job because he has spent so much time in jail or the woman who wants to get a protection from abuse order to protect herself and her family yet is overwhelmed by the entire process. As the conversation about domestic violence evolves, the 20 Year Lookback is representative of progress made and challenges that remain.

As the 13th Biennial report goes to print, the world has been in a pandemic for a year. We must face the realities that the pandemic has impacted all budgets. It is critical, however, that Maine prioritize funding for domestic and sexual violence prevention and intervention. People who commit domestic and sexual violence have a societal and economic impact on all of us. Continued funding for victims' services must be realized to keep the momentum going forward.

I would like to take this opportunity to highlight some of the more impactful legislative changes that are a direct result of the work of the Panel, some of which I had the honor to support while I was a legislator.

- In the 10th Biennial report (2014), the Panel recommended training for criminal justice professionals on the difference between Certified Batterer Intervention Programs (CBIPs) and anger management programs or domestic abuse counseling. In 2016, by order of the legislature, LD 150 resolved the Maine Commission on Domestic and Sexual Abuse to review pretrial and post-conviction use of CBIPS. In 2017, LD 814 formalized in statute that CBIPs are the appropriate and effective community intervention in cases involving domestic abuse, not anger management or counseling. In addition, LD 814 requires the Courts to articulate on the record the court's reasoning when CBIPs are not ordered in certain domestic violence crimes.
- The Panel has repeatedly reviewed cases in which children have lost both parents because of homicide-suicide or lost one parent to homicide while the other parent has been incarcerated for the crime. In 2003, in response to a Panel recommendation, the Maine legislature passed a law that required Maine Department of Health and Human Services to perform an emergency assessment in the event of a homicide, for the purposes of temporarily placing children with a relative or other responsible person. (See 22 MRS §4023 (8)).

- In multiple case reviews, the Panel observed the need for additional funding and enhanced services for public health nursing across the state for high-risk families. In 2017, the Maine State Legislature passed LD 1108 – An Act to Restore Public Health Nursing Services.
- In the 9th Biennial report (2012), the Panel recommended that licensed, registered and certified mental health practitioners receive training in domestic violence. In 2013, LD 1238, An Act to Improve Professional Training for Licensed Mental Health Clinicians was enacted into law.

These legislative changes are representative of just a few improvements in laws, policy and practice attributable to the work of the Homicide Review Panel. The 20 Year Lookback represents hard work and dedication by a team of people who are committed to saving lives. I thank you all.

INTRODUCTION BY PANEL CHAIR

LISA J. MARCHESE, DEPUTY ATTORNEY GENERAL

For the past 23 years, the Maine Domestic Abuse Homicide Review Panel has met monthly to retrospectively review cases of intimate partner and intrafamilial homicide. The 13th Biennial report is entitled simply A 20 Year Lookback and is dedicated to the victims of domestic abuse homicide in Maine 1998-2020. In recognition of the Panel's twenty years of biennial reviews, this report reflects new recommendations that are presented in summary form and by system, in the context of previous years' recommendations.

In the past 20 years, the Panel has made recommendations that have resulted in legislative and system changes with the goal of keeping victims safe and holding offenders accountable. The Panel has also made repeated recommendations that have not yet resulted in change. While it is discouraging to see that some themes emerge over multiple years with no systemic change in policy and practice, the Panel remains hopeful that this report will focus the appropriate decision makers on the barriers that prevent victims from being safe. Throughout this report you will see reference to Maine's Coordinated Community Response (CCR) to domestic violence. In 2021, we know that keeping victims safe and holding defendants accountable is not the responsibility of a single entity. It is the Criminal and Civil Justice Systems working with DHHS and Healthcare and the greater Community of family, friends and co-workers that will ultimately result in true change.

It has been my honor and privilege to Chair the Homicide Review Panel for the past 20 years. The work that has led to the 20 Year Lookback is nothing short of extraordinary. The 13th Biennial report is by far the most in-depth and reflective analysis of domestic violence homicides that has been done in this state. This report would not have been possible without the time and commitment of Francine Garland Stark, Executive Director of the Maine Coalition to End Domestic Violence and Kate Faragher Houghton, Violence Prevention Consultant and Former Panel Coordinator, both of whom recognized the value of coalescing 20-years' worth of data collection, observations, and recommendations into a single report. Thank you, Francine and Kate. Thank you also to Stacie Bourassa, Project Coordinator at the Attorney General's Office who spent hours compiling and creating the dynamic data presentation and entire format for the report and Yvonne Borelli-Chace, Panel Coordinator who devoted countless hours to ensuring the report reflected the views of the Panel. Thank you also to Panel members Polly Campbell, Alice Clifford, Nancy Fishwick, Jennifer Fiske, Rebecca Hobbs and Bobbi Johnson for their many contributions. Lastly, this report would not be possible without the dedication of the members of the entire Panel who honor the lives of the victims at every meeting. Some Panel members have dedicated their time to Panel meetings and reports for the past 20 years. I am proud and humbled to be a part of this important work.

ABOUT

PANEL DESCRIPTION

By law, effective October 1, 1997, the Maine Legislature charged the Maine Commission on Domestic and Sexual Abuse with the task of establishing a Domestic Abuse Homicide Review Panel to "review the deaths of persons who are killed by family or household members." The legislation mandated that the Panel "recommend to state and local agencies methods of improving the systems for protecting persons from domestic and sexual abuse including modifications of laws, rules, policies, and procedures following completion of adjudication." The Panel was further mandated "to collect and compile data related to domestic and sexual abuse." 19-A M.R.S. §4013(4). See Appendix A for the complete language of the Panel's enabling legislation.

The Maine Domestic Abuse Homicide Review Panel meets on a monthly basis to review and discuss domestic abuse homicide cases. The Panel Coordinator works with the prosecutor and/or the lead detective to present to the multi-disciplinary Panel detailed data about the homicide, information about the relationship of the parties, and any relevant events leading up to the homicide.

The Panel reviews these cases in order to identify potential trends in domestic abuse and recommend systemic changes that could prevent future deaths from occurring in Maine. The Panel plays a significant role in the prevention and intervention work that occurs in Maine by gathering opinions, analysis, and expertise from a variety of professional disciplines across the state.

MISSION STATEMENT

The mission of the Maine Domestic Abuse Homicide Review Panel is to engage in collaborative, multidisciplinary case reviews of domestic abuse-related homicides for the purpose of developing recommendations for state and local government and other public and private entities in order to improve coordinated community responses to protect people from domestic abuse.

SUMMARY OF CASE DATA

13TH BIENNIAL REVIEW PERIOD

Introduction

This biennial report addresses the fatality reviews completed by the Maine Domestic Abuse Homicide Review Panel since 2018. The Panel reviews domestic abuse homicide cases after sentencing or acquittal, and domestic abuse homicide-suicide cases after investigations are complete.

During the period established for this review, the Panel reviewed nineteen cases involving domestic abuse, which occurred from 2014 to 2019. Of the cases, eighteen were classified as domestic abuse homicide cases and one was classified as a suicide preceded by prolonged intimate partner violence. A total of twenty perpetrators in the cases reviewed were responsible for twenty-one victims of domestic abuse homicide, one suicide, and one victim of serious injury who was a bystander.

In the current biennial review period, the following homicides occurred in Maine:

- In 2018, nineteen perpetrators committed twenty homicides, nine of which the Department of Public Safety categorized as domestic abuse homicides.
- In 2019, nineteen perpetrators committed twenty-two homicides, nine of which were categorized as domestic abuse homicides.

Together, these eighteen domestic abuse homicides accounted for nearly 43% of Maine's total homicides during this two year period. Homicide lists from the Maine Department of Public Safety may be found in Appendix B of this report.

According to the Violence Policy Center's recent study, "When Men Murder Women: An Analysis of 2018 Homicide Data," Maine ranked 24th in the nation for single male offender and single female victim homicides. See: <https://vpc.org/studies/wmmw/2020.pdf>

(All data used throughout this report has been rounded to the nearest whole percent)

Method of Homicide by 19 Perpetrators

TRENDING DATA:

As depicted in Chart 1, and as reflected in every prior report of this Panel, perpetrators most commonly used firearms to commit domestic abuse homicides.

Of the 19 perpetrators of homicide responsible in the cases reviewed by the Panel:

8 of 20 perpetrators used a firearm to kill 10 victims and seriously injure 1 other

3 of 20 used blunt force trauma/objects to murder 3 victims

2 used knives to kill 3 victims

6 of the 20 perpetrators used other methods to kill 6 victims; 4 used their hands to kill 4 victims, of these 3 also used objects; 1 asphyxiated his victim; and 1 used a pair of scissors to stab and kill his victim*

 (1 perpetrator, who is not reflected in this chart, committed years of abuse against the victim who died by suicide)*

The ages of the 20 perpetrators ranged from 17 years to 82 years old.

One of the perpetrators of intimate partner homicide also committed intrafamilial homicide, and is detailed in both categories below*

8 of the 11 perpetrators who committed intimate partner homicide were between the ages of 25-54.

All 10 of the perpetrators who committed intrafamilial homicides were under the age of 55, and half were under the age of 35.

For the 22 homicide victims and 1 victim of serious injury in the cases reviewed, ages of the parties ranged from 7 weeks to 78 years old.

Serious injury not included in above data set*

6 victims were 55 or older,
12 victims were under the age 40, and 5 victims were just 10 years of age or younger.

2020 Biennial Review Cases: Intimate Partner and Intrafamilial Homicide Data

The Panel reviews cases of “intimate partner homicides” as well as “intrafamilial homicides.” Intimate partner homicide involves a person killing a current or former intimate partner or spouse. Intrafamilial homicide refers to a person killing a parent, child, sibling or other family member besides an intimate partner. The Panel makes every effort to review all intimate partner homicides and as many intrafamilial homicides as possible.

The cases reviewed during this two-year period involved a total of eleven perpetrators and twelve victims of intimate partner homicide, and one related serious injury. These included ten female and two male victims of homicide, plus one male serious injury victim: nine men killed their current or former female intimate partners, of these, one father killed his female partner, his adult son, a neighbor, and then seriously injured another neighbor; one man killed his live-in male partner; one female victim died by suicide after prolonged exposure to intimate partner violence. 100% of perpetrators of intimate partner homicide during this review period were male.

12 Intimate Partner Homicide Victims by Gender
(Includes one male bystander)

Chart 3- IPV

There were an additional nine perpetrators responsible for the ten victims in total of intrafamilial homicide. These included four female and six male homicide victims: two fathers killed their infant sons; one son killed both of his parents; one adult son killed his father; one adult grandson killed his grandmother; one stepfather and mother killed their daughter; one mother killed her infant son; and one step-grandmother killed her granddaughter.

Chart 4- IFV

2020 Biennial Review Cases: Intimate Partner Homicide Data

Of the nineteen cases reviewed by the Panel, eleven involved intimate partner homicide. Nine men killed their current or former female intimate partners, and of these, one man also killed an additional bystander and seriously injured another. One man killed his male intimate partner, and one man abused his female intimate partner who died by suicide.

Of these 11* IPV homicides:

7 perpetrators killed 8 victims using a firearm

1 perpetrator killed a victim with a knife

*2 perpetrators used other objects to kill 2 victims (scissors, baseball bat)

(1 perpetrator, who is not reflected in this chart, committed years of abuse against the victim who died by suicide)

TRENDING DATA:

Perpetrators most commonly use firearms to commit intimate partner violence homicide in Maine.

The ages of the perpetrators in these cases ranged from 27 to 82 years old.

The ages of the victims ranged from 30 to 67 years old.

6 of the victims were under the age of 40.

2020 Biennial Review Cases: Intrafamilial Homicide Data

The Panel reviewed nine cases involving people who killed family members other than intimate partners. In these cases, ten perpetrators killed ten people. One case involved two perpetrators, and one case involved both intrafamilial and intimate partner homicide, and so that perpetrator is represented in both data sets.

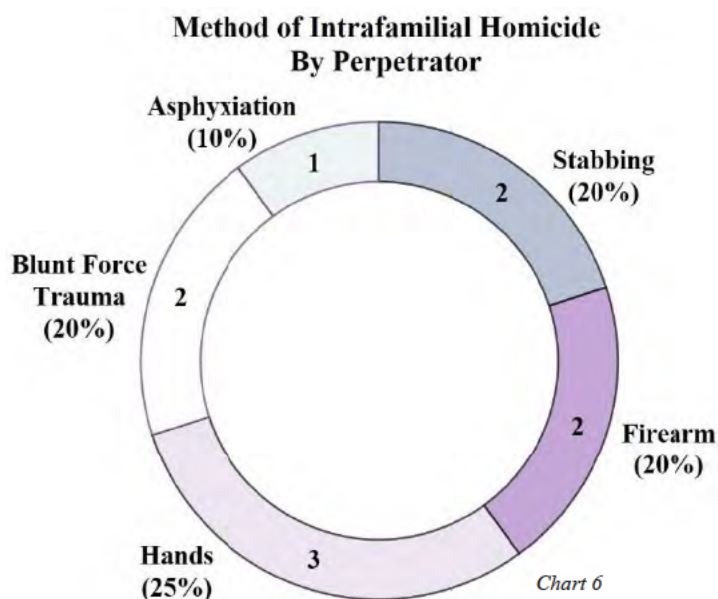

The ages of the perpetrators in these cases ranged from 17 to 54 years old.

The ages of the victims of IFV homicide ranged from 7 weeks to 78 years old.

TRENDING DATA:

In the context of intrafamilial homicide, perpetrators of all ages place children and older adults at greatest risk.

Of these 10 IFV homicides:

4 perpetrators used their hands to kill 3 victims

2 perpetrators killed 2 victims using a firearm

1 perpetrator used a knife to kill 2 victims

2 perpetrators killed 2 victims by blunt force trauma

1 perpetrator asphyxiated 1 victim

2020 Biennial Review Cases: Children

Impacts of Offenders on Children

Offenders have devastating and lasting impacts on children. People who commit abuse and violence do not see children as people with equal value, as evidenced by the cases reviewed in which twenty perpetrators directly changed the lives of twenty-three children under the age of 18. The Panel reviewed five cases when children were directly murdered by their family members. In addition, multiple cases involved offenders who otherwise subjected children to domestic abuse and trauma. (Some perpetrators committed abuse in more than one category.)

5 of the 20 perpetrators ended the lives of 5 children.

9 perpetrators directly abused children in their care.

5 of the 20 perpetrators killed women who were mothers to 10 children.

10 surviving children were home at the time a homicide occurred,
3 of whom found the bodies of their mothers.

Due to homicide, incarceration, or suicide,
16 minor children lost at least one of their parents or primary caregivers.

Futures without Violence and the National Child Traumatic Stress Network have published helpful information and resources on children impacted by domestic violence. See <http://www.nctsn.org/content/resources>

2020 Biennial Review Cases: Involvement with Community

In the nineteen cases reviewed, perpetrators and victims were involved with several different community services. The following table reflects only the information available to the Panel, and in some cases, the perpetrators and victims were involved with multiple services.

CONNECTING THEMES:

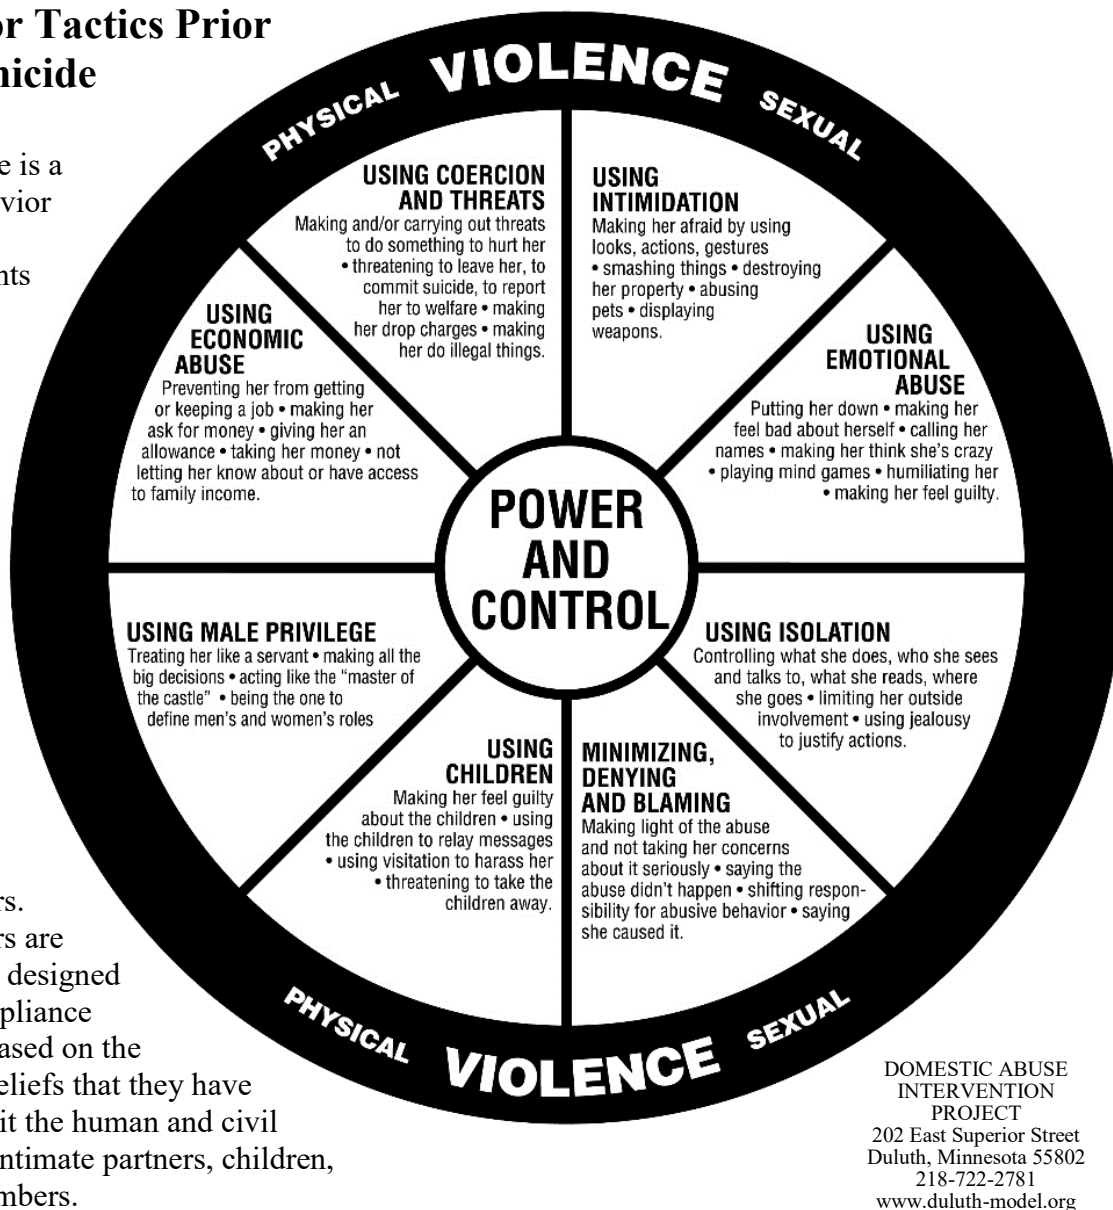

Family Members, Friends, Neighbors, & Co-Workers

In fourteen of the nineteen cases reviewed by the Panel, family, friends or co-workers were aware of domestic abuse occurring in the relationship of the perpetrator and the victim. In the cases reviewed, friends and family of the victims tried to assist victims by talking with them about Protection from Abuse Orders, calling police, encouraging or helping them to move out, assisting the victim with retrieving belongings, and following up with the victim after witnessing abuse.

Key relationships in a victim's life can be a source of support and assistance in situations of abuse. The family, friends and co-workers of a victim can play an important role in preventing the abuse and death of victims. The Panel recognizes that people who are abusive may also present risks to those who help victims. The Panel emphasizes that anyone who is aware of a person who is committing abuse against a current or former intimate partner or family member can contact a community-based advocacy organization for support and resources to safely help victims. In addition, encouraging victims of abuse to contact community-based advocacy organizations could help break their isolation, connect them with safety planning services, and potentially save their lives.

Perpetrator Tactics Prior to the Homicide

Domestic abuse is a pattern of behavior over time, not isolated incidents of physical or sexual violence. Perpetrators of domestic abuse use an array of coercive behaviors to assert and maintain power and control over their intimate partners, children, and family members. These behaviors are intentional and designed to enforce compliance through fear, based on the perpetrators' beliefs that they have the right to limit the human and civil rights of their intimate partners, children, and family members.

The Power and Control Wheel is a diagram that includes examples of the tactics that people who commit domestic abuse and violence use against their current/former intimate partners. Created in 1984 by domestic abuse survivors, this tool is used worldwide to support and/or educate individuals, communities, and professionals across many fields. The Wheel is available in multiple languages and has been adapted culturally as well. A powerful outreach tool, the Wheel validates the common experiences of victims/survivors, provides a framework for exploring the tactics used by those who are abusive, and informs safety strategizing with advocates and other professionals.

The center of the Wheel is labeled Power and Control, naming the result of and intention behind the tactics in the spokes and rim. The rim of the Wheel represents physical and sexual violence, the threat or presence of which frames and enables the other tactics named in the spokes.

The Prevalence of Suicidality, Stalking, Strangulation, Sexual Abuse, and Serial Battering

In this and all past reports, the Panel has observed several dangerous and prevalent tactics employed by perpetrators of homicide. The Panel recommends that all people and systems who are concerned about or respond to perpetrators and/or victims of domestic abuse and violence identify these tactics as abusive and lift this information to support interventions and safety measures. Many of these tactics are recognized as crimes in Maine. In the cases reviewed, prior to the homicides and the case in which the victim died by suicide, perpetrators frequently used five high-risk tactics: suicidality, stalking, strangulation, sexual abuse, and serial battering.

The Panel recognizes that people often commit abuse that is unreported or undocumented. The Panel's information about tactics used in these cases is limited to the documentation available, which while instructive and in many cases extensive, may not capture the full scope of the abuse and violence. The perpetrator tactics described in this section are those apparent from the documentation.

- 1) Suicidality – The Panel continues to review cases in which the perpetrator displayed signs of suicidality prior to the homicide, often dying by suicide after committing homicide. In the cases reviewed in the last biennium, 35% (7 of 20) of the perpetrators died by suicide after killing an intimate partner or family member. Perpetrators' suicidality is a consistent sign of lethal danger to victims of domestic abuse and to the perpetrators themselves. The Panel's biennial review periods reinforce that suicidality is strongly linked to homicidality, with an average of 50% and as many as 69% (9th HRP report, p. 13) of perpetrators exhibiting suicidal behavior prior to attempting or committing homicide. In all professional sectors, any protocols and training regarding responses to domestic abuse and violence should address the connection between suicidal ideation and homicide. The Panel encourages every community member to identify the increased risk to victims when people committing abuse are suicidal, and reach out for assistance with these dangerous situations.
- 2) Stalking – Stalking an intimate partner is a dangerous and prevalent tactic of abusers and a powerful form of coercive control. In the cases reviewed in the last two years, 30% (6 of 20) of the perpetrators stalked the victims prior to committing homicide. In past reports, the Panel has observed that at least 50% of the perpetrators stalked their victims prior to committing homicide. While dangerous and prevalent, the Panel observes that stalking is often overlooked or minimized by people surrounding the perpetrator and victim. The emergence of extensively available and easy-to-use technology has given people who commit abuse heightened ability to control, monitor, and track victims. The Panel observes that people who commit stalking use social media to maintain a presence in the victims' lives, to share shaming images, to harass and intimidate, and create false narratives about themselves and the victims. People who manipulate through social media may further isolate victims away from other people, including service providers. Email and texting are also prevalent forms of misusing technology to commit abuse including stalking. The Panel has reviewed cases involving extensive and public stalking prior to homicides that was not reported, investigated, or prosecuted.

- 3) Non-Fatal Strangulation – Maine law defines strangulation as “impeding the breathing or circulation of the blood of another person by intentionally, knowingly or recklessly applying pressure on the person’s throat or neck” (17-A M.R.S. §208(C)). Beginning with its 10th report in 2014, the Panel has observed that at least 25% of the perpetrators non-fatally strangled the victims prior to committing the homicides. Women who experience non-fatal strangulation are 750% more likely to be killed. This remains true for the Panel’s current biennial review period in which 25% (5 of 20) of the perpetrators committed non-fatal strangulation against the victims prior to the homicides. It is crucial for survivors, first responders, and bystanders to recognize the prevalence and extremely dangerous effects of non-fatal strangulation, a life-threatening and often repeated tactic of domestic violence.
- 4) Sexual Abuse – Sexual abuse is a common tactic of coercive control used by perpetrators of domestic abuse and violence to assert ongoing dominance over victims. In this biennium, 20% (4 of 20) of the perpetrators were known to have sexually abused the victims. In its 12th report, the Panel observed that 27% of the perpetrators had sexually assaulted the victims during their relationships before killing them, and multiple perpetrators of homicide in that two years of cases had histories of sexual abuse against previous intimate partners.
- 5) Serial Battering – Serial battering refers to perpetrators who commit domestic abuse and violence successively against multiple intimate partners, creating immense cumulative harm. In the Panel’s most recent biennial review period, 15% (3 of 20) of the perpetrators committed serial battering. In its 12th report, the Panel observed that 53% of the homicide perpetrators had a history of abusing intimate partners or family members.

The Panel recommends that all system professionals engage in regular opportunities to educate themselves and refresh their understanding of the dynamics and appropriate responses in high risk domestic violence cases, including known lethality factors and suicide concerns. In high risk cases in which professionals are involved but not attuned to potential dangers, victims become even more vulnerable and perpetrators are empowered.

Additional Perpetrator Tactics

The Panel continues to observe additional repeated perpetrator tactics prior to the homicides in the cases reviewed, reflective of the tactics on the Power and Control Wheel. The Panel notes them here with the cumulative prevalence among cases reviewed in the Panel’s last three reports, when the Panel began to note these tactics:

Physical Abuse – At least 69% of the perpetrators physically abused the victims prior to the homicides. 75% (15 of 20) of perpetrators physically abused the victims in the cases from the current biennium.

Emotional/Verbal Abuse – At least 76% of the perpetrators used emotional and/or verbal abuse as coercive and controlling tactics in the relationships with the victims prior to the homicides. 70% (14 of 20) of perpetrators in current biennium cases emotionally/verbally abused the victims.

Previous Threats to Kill – At least 50% of the perpetrators previously threatened homicide. This includes threats made to kill the victims in the cases reviewed as well as threats to kill others associated with the victims. 55% (11 of 20) of the perpetrators in current biennium cases previously threatened homicide.

Isolation and Jealousy – At least 43% of the perpetrators isolated the victims from family, friends, and other support networks. This includes incidents when perpetrators kidnapped their intimate partners. 50% (10 of 20) of the perpetrators in current biennium cases isolated the victims in this way.

Increasing Perpetrator Accountability: Key Areas

In the time the Panel has been reviewing Maine homicide cases, it has raised two significant areas of concern in case after case. These areas arise from the choices and behaviors of the people who commit domestic abuse related homicides. The Panel observes that individuals and professional systems struggle to intervene effectively in these areas, and collectively fail to protect victims from the people who kill them.

Firearms

In the Panel's 20 years of biennial reviews, people who commit domestic abuse related homicide have used firearms more than any other method to kill. In current biennium cases, 40% (8 of 20) of perpetrators used firearms and 60% (12 of 20) had legal access to or owned firearms.

In cases when the perpetrator was prohibited from possessing firearms, the Panel has frequently observed gaps in the enforcement of civil Firearms Relinquishment Orders that accompany qualifying Protection from Abuse Orders, as well as enforcement of laws that otherwise prohibit persons from owning or possessing firearms. The Panel observes that removing firearms from dangerous individuals and/or people known to be legally prohibited from possessing firearms can enhance safety and minimize the risk of injuries and lethality. The Panel has repeatedly and continues to recommend:

- Consistent and effective enforcement of Firearms Relinquishment Orders granted with Protection from Abuse Orders.
- Development of statewide policies and procedures to ensure the relinquishment of firearms to law enforcement by persons legally prohibited from possessing them. This should include that when a person is released from a jail or correctional facility with conditions of release that prohibit the use or possession of firearms or other dangerous weapons, upon their release, they be notified/reminded of the condition and that it be asked and documented if they have any weapons/firearms that must be removed/relinquished. The Panel notes that a multi-disciplinary subcommittee of the Maine Commission on Domestic and Sexual Abuse is currently engaged in this work, advancing the Panel's recommendations in past reports.

- Recognition by everyone – bystanders and all professional disciplines – of the significant connection among suicide, homicide, and firearms, and the importance of involving law enforcement to secure or remove firearms to prevent tragedy. Maine’s “Yellow Flag Law” (34-B M.R.S. §3862-A) provides a mechanism for temporarily removing firearms and other dangerous weapons from persons who are medically assessed to be at substantial risk in the foreseeable future of committing serious physical harm to themselves or others. Following the medical assessment, a judge determines whether a removal of firearms is warranted.
- In its current review period, the Panel noted that victims of domestic violence may acquire firearms to assist in their personal protection due to risks from a person who commits domestic abuse and violence against them. The Panel recommends that bystanders who receive disclosures from victims of domestic violence, or otherwise become aware that victims acquire firearms, should be aware that the presence of firearms may lead to increased danger for victims. The Panel encourages bystanders to assist victims in contacting community-based advocacy organizations to explore high risk safety planning in situations when victims are so afraid that they have acquired firearms for their protection.

Collusion

The Panel has consistently observed how people who commit abuse seek collusion from others in the community, including in the professional sectors interacting with them. The goal of perpetrators is to avoid accountability for their abusive actions. Collusion here refers to the unfortunate and dangerous spectrum of responses from bystanders and professionals who: fail to identify abusive tactics; minimize the effects of abuse; mischaracterize domestic violence as “mutual” conflict or discord; agree with the abusive person that their abusive behaviors are justified; and/or support the abusive person’s belief that the abuse only “happens” because of the behaviors and characteristics of the victim.

One measure of collusion is how people in victims’ lives, even when well-meaning and concerned for victims’ safety, typically focus on the decisions and actions of victims, rather than the behaviors and choices of the people committing abuse. People around the victim may hope and/or believe that a change in the victim’s choices will stop the abuse and violence. This mistakenly implies that it is the victim’s presence and behaviors that cause the abuse in the first place. The Panel has reviewed post-trial surveys of jurors and observed the impact of this focus on victims’ actions manifesting in jurors’ reluctance to convict those who have committed egregious violence; jurors focused instead on the question of why the victim was still in relationship with the perpetrator when the crime(s) occurred. The Panel observes that while victims can and do take action to try to stop the abuse and keep themselves and their children safe, ultimately, the abusive behaviors – up to and including homicide – are the sole responsibility of those who perpetrate the harm.

The Panel observes that after homicides, bystanders may come forward to say they did not observe the perpetrator’s violence and aggression or did not understand the level of risk. Domestic abuse and violence involve methods of ongoing manipulation against a victim. The tactics of manipulation, minimizing, denying or blaming, may result in bystanders not believing victims and instead supporting the person committing abuse.

The challenge for all professionals and bystanders is to avoid aligning with perpetrators of domestic abuse and violence. The Panel observes that when people accept justifications for abusive and violent behavior that deny abuse happened, minimize the harm done, and blame the victim for causing the abuse or failing to stop it by better protecting themselves, this is collusion with the perpetrator.

“In order to escape accountability for his crimes, the perpetrator does everything in his power to promote forgetting. Secrecy and silence are the perpetrator’s first line of defense. If secrecy fails, the perpetrator attacks the credibility of his victim. If he cannot silence her absolutely, he tries to make sure that no one listens. To this end, he marshals an impressive array of arguments, from the most blatant denial to the most sophisticated and elegant rationalization. After every atrocity one can expect to hear the same predictable apologies: it never happened; the victim lies; the victim exaggerates; the victim brought it upon herself; and in any case it is time to forget the past and move on. The more powerful the perpetrator, the greater is his prerogative to name and define reality, and the more completely his arguments prevail.”

OBSERVATIONS & RECOMMENDATIONS

The Panel established the tradition of making observations and recommendations to various systems and organizations based on its analysis of the domestic abuse homicide cases reviewed for each report. Marking 20 years of biennial reviews, the Panel has chosen in this report to bring focus to recurring themes of observations and recommendations from its twelve previous reports related to public services and institutions, professional disciplines, and the community.

Summary of Observations:

The process of reviewing domestic violence homicides is instructive because it provides for in-depth, retrospective review and analysis of the lives of victims and perpetrators following homicides. The Panel recognizes that most domestic violence offenders do not ultimately commit homicide and that – fortunately – there are far more survivors of domestic abuse and violence than victims of domestic violence homicide. Maine has made progress; however, there is more to be done. The Panel observes the need for everyone to learn to recognize the dynamics of domestic abuse, how to support accountability for someone committing abuse, how to be helpful to a victim, and what resources are available to each of us. This fundamental approach applies to people in their personal and professional spheres.

In the Panel's reports over these 20 years, several observations are consistently apparent:

1. People close to the victim – family, friends, neighbors, coworkers – have been aware of the abuse and concerned about what might happen, but unaware and unsure of how to be helpful.
2. Professionals who interacted with the offender and/or victim prior to the homicide did not follow the best practices and/or policies of their disciplines intended to ensure that they identify abusive individuals and initiate appropriate interventions to prevent further harm, including failure to:
 - a. Ask about/screen/investigate fully for domestic abuse;
 - b. Refer to appropriate community-based advocacy organizations;
 - c. Make legally mandated reports to Child or Adult Protective Services; and/or
 - d. Document the above.
3. Perpetrators of domestic violence homicides have frequently:
 - a. Threatened to commit suicide and/or homicide;
 - b. Used the methods of strangulation and stalking to harm their victims;
 - c. Exposed their children or stepchildren to violence and verbal abuse against their mothers and subjected the children to abuse and neglect;
 - d. Been charged with domestic violence related crimes prior to the homicide;
 - e. Received sentences for previous crimes that did not prohibit them from possessing firearms (as the initial charges would have done) and did not require Certified Batterer Intervention Program completion.

4. Adult victims of domestic violence homicides have typically:
 - a. Not sought assistance from community-based advocacy organizations;
 - b. Not obtained Protection from Abuse Orders;
 - c. Told someone that they were afraid the abuser would kill them.
5. Child victims of domestic violence homicides have typically:
 - a. Been subjected to generational, severe, and ongoing physical and verbal abuse in a context of isolation and neglect;
 - b. Experienced intense pressure not to disclose their experiences, due to consequences to them and their families;
 - c. Had their suffering and injuries go unnoticed and/or unacknowledged by their extended families and the professionals with whom they had contact;
 - d. Not received age-appropriate and child-centered assessments and interventions by the professionals with whom they had contact;
 - e. Had no access to trauma-informed intervention programs when they survive domestic abuse, including the homicide of a parent or other family member.
6. Older adult victims of domestic violence homicides have often been caregivers or companions to those who kill them:
 - a. Their adult children who have untreated chronic mental illness, substance use, or personality disorders. In these cases, the older adult victims:
 - i. Have sought but been unable to obtain behavioral health and other services to replace themselves as caregivers;
 - ii. Have been reluctant to involve the criminal justice system;
 - iii. Have been reluctant to obtain Protection from Abuse Orders.
 - b. Their spouses of many years. In these cases:
 - i. Isolation and resulting lack of available information have led others including family, friends, and the media to be unsure whether to characterize the homicide/suicide as a “pact” at end of life, or a result of the perpetrator’s position of power and control over his wife;
 - ii. The perpetrators, in all the Panel’s reviews of this type of case, have been men.

Summary of Recommendations:

The Panel’s recommendations from the most recent biennial review period mirror many of those brought forward in past reports. In recognition of the Panel’s twenty years of biennial reviews, new recommendations are presented in summary form and by system, in the context of our previous years’ recommendations.

Overall, the Panel recommends sustained and expanded efforts to maintain and expand Maine’s Coordinated Community Response (CCR) to domestic violence. “Coordinated Community Response” refers to an interconnected and multidisciplinary approach to ending domestic violence by enhancing abuser accountability and supporting victim safety. Since the early 1990s, CCR efforts have been nationally funded and supported with training and technical assistance to enhance prevention and intervention strategies. CCR work involves the criminal and civil justice systems, community-based advocacy organizations, healthcare and behavioral health organizations, faith communities, child welfare organizations, Certified Batterer Intervention Programs, schools, government agencies, and many others. CCR efforts focus on facilitating new connections and strengthening existing relationships, and may take the shape of task forces, CCR teams, and high-risk response teams. One desired outcome is a strong mutual understanding of the roles of various agencies and systems. Another outcome is an overall higher understanding of the dynamics of domestic abuse and violence, that results in less successful manipulation of systems by perpetrators who consistently seek collusion from others.

An effective CCR creates and maintains interagency, coordinated approaches to the larger issue of domestic violence as well as to individual cases. CCR teams and response protocols establish a coherent process, helping to ensure that victims receive consistent, comprehensive services and referrals, and offenders are held accountable across all parts of their community involved. Methods used by CCR teams may include development of CCR risk assessment and management protocols, internal information-sharing and training, community awareness and prevention campaigns, case reviews, and management of high risk cases by multidisciplinary teams. The coordination of all agencies through a sustained, involved CCR has been demonstrated to have a positive impact on victim safety and offender accountability.

The Panel is a part of Maine's CCR, as a statewide fatality review team that brings together a multidisciplinary group of people to review cases and identify strategies to prevent homicides. After 20 years of biennial reviews in a rapidly changing world, the Panel remains committed to its mission of identifying gaps in prevention and intervention and bringing attention to those for improvement of all communities, organizations and systems in Maine.

The Criminal and Civil Justice Systems

Through its 20 years of reports, the Panel has recognized gaps in the legal system and has recommended improvements to the law, policy and practice that structure the work of law enforcement officers, prosecutors, judges, corrections/probation officers, and advocates. The Panel observes that significant efforts have strengthened the justice system participation in the Coordinated Community Response and its response overall to perpetrators and victims of domestic abuse and violence. However, the Panel has consistently seen the effectiveness of these systems fail when individuals or agencies do not adhere to best practices for their disciplines. Because the Coordinated Community Response is centered on the criminal and civil justice systems to increase offender accountability and enhance victim safety, the Panel often directs many of its recommendations to these systems.

In past reports and now also including the cases that were part of its most recent biennial review period, the Panel has repeatedly recommended the following areas of improvement for Maine's criminal and civil justice systems:

Law Enforcement

- Ensure access by all law enforcement agencies to specially trained Domestic Violence Investigators located either within the Offices of the District Attorney or law enforcement agencies to support thorough evidence collection and investigative follow up in domestic violence cases. Domestic Violence Investigators are currently available in several agencies and regions of the state to consult and inform development of additional programs. The Panel recognizes that establishing permanent funding for these positions is challenging, but such specialization is an essential component of homicide prevention.

- Follow the best practices for law enforcement response to domestic violence related incidents. These are embodied in the Maine Criminal Justice Academy (MCJA) mandatory minimum standards, the Maine Chiefs of Police Association (MCOPA) model policy, and training through the Maine Criminal Justice Academy. When officers do not follow best practices, it may have the impact of empowering perpetrators and making victims more vulnerable to abuse. The Panel particularly recommends that officers maintain vigilance after repeated calls for service regarding the same couple or family, as this indicates high risk. The current MCJA standards, MCOPA policy, and Best Practices Card for Law Enforcement Response to Domestic Violence are all included in Appendix C.
- Include questions about non-fatal strangulation in all interviews with victims, at every call for service, no matter the initial impression of whether an assault has occurred. The prevalence and dangerousness of offenders who use non-fatal strangulation requires this.
- Increase training, focus, and law enforcement attention on high risk offenders, including when investigating incidents over time involving the same people. Repeat calls for service indicates higher risk, not less. Identify high risk offenders through the Ontario Domestic Assault Risk Assessment (ODARA) and consideration of other known lethality indicators (strangulation, sexual abuse, suicidality, stalking, serial battering, threats to kill, etc.). Local CCR efforts including task forces, high risk response teams, and specialized interagency training enhance and support risk assessment and management. Individuals, organizations and systems can connect with the community-based advocacy organization in their area to learn what CCR efforts are underway and how to support and/or participate in these initiatives.
- Refer victims of intimate partner violence and intrafamilial violence to the services of the community-based advocacy organizations and document this in investigative reports, as required under 19-A M.R.S. §4012(6)(C) and MCJA Policy 3, standard #15. The Panel notes the importance of making these referrals in cases that lack evidence to support probable cause to make an arrest.
- Provide information to victims of intimate partner violence and intrafamilial violence about Protection from Abuse Orders and document this in investigative reports, as required under 19-A M.R.S. §4012(6)(C) and MCJA Policy 3, standard #14. The Panel notes the importance of making these referrals in cases that lack evidence to support probable cause to make an arrest.
- Share investigative reports with domestic violence/sexual assault advocates for the purposes of safety planning with victims, pursuant to 16 M.R.S. §806.

- In cases where perpetrators cross state lines to commit crimes involving domestic violence or other crimes, a victim of domestic violence is reported missing, or the perpetrator possessed a firearm illegally, law enforcement agencies should consider involving the FBI and/or the U.S. Attorney's Office in the investigation and prosecution.
- Conduct internal agency reviews required by MCJA Policy 3, Standard #23* whenever a domestic violence offender commits homicide or harm resulting in serious injury during the time a permanent Protection from Abuse Order is in effect or when there was past agency involvement with the people involved. As required, include a domestic violence advocate in this review process, and provide the reports on these reviews to the Maine Office of the Attorney General for inclusion in the Panel's case reviews.
- Add training about officer and agency responsibilities related to domestic violence to required training for new police chiefs statewide.
- Engage in training and critical incident debriefing to address vicarious/secondary trauma and compassion fatigue. Responding to domestic violence incidents over a career may have a cumulative effect, as may repeat calls for service involving the same people. Responding to serious injury cases and homicides may be especially traumatic.

The policy states: Requirement that an agency review its compliance with all applicable provisions of this policy in the event that a victim of domestic violence who resided in the agency's jurisdiction is killed or seriously injured during the time that any temporary or permanent Protection from Abuse Order was in effect or if there had been past agency involvement related to interactions between the perpetrator and the victim. The review shall be conducted in consultation with a domestic violence advocate as defined in 16 M.R.S. §53-B(1)(A) and a sworn law enforcement officer designated or trained as a domestic violence investigator. A report of such review must be kept on file by the agency. In any case where one or more victims are killed, a copy of the report shall be forwarded to the Maine Domestic Abuse Homicide Review Panel through the Office of the Attorney General.

Prosecution

- Participate in Coordinated Community Response efforts statewide and locally including task forces, high risk response teams, and specialized interagency training.
- Implement practices that account for the likelihood that many victims will not see it as safe to actively support prosecutions:
 - Center prosecution on evidence other than victim testimony.
 - Train law enforcement to investigate cases on the assumption that victim testimony will not be available.
- Communicate regularly with victims about the status, timeline, and progress of prosecution through ongoing contacts by prosecutors, victim witness advocates and/or trial assistants.
- Increase prosecution attention on high risk offenders, including when prosecuting repeat cases involving the same people. Repeat crimes indicate higher risk, not less. Identify high risk offenders through the Ontario Domestic Assault Risk Assessment (ODARA) and consideration of other known lethality indicators (strangulation, sexual abuse, suicidality, stalking, serial battering, threats to kill, etc.).

- Charge stalking when a person repeatedly violates conditions of release or violates protective orders by contacting the victim.
- Use ODARA as one of the considerations in determining whether to use deferred disposition.
- When reducing charges and accepting pleas, consider the impact on subsequent charge enhancements and on the defendants' status regarding prohibitions to possess firearms. Consider whether the person's demonstrated course of conduct warrants those consequences.
- Address domestic violence specifically at sentencing, and involve a Pre-Sentence Investigation for a third offense, to include a dangerousness assessment. Consider a continuance before sentencing repeat offenders, to support complete information gathering, including victim input.
- Notify the appropriate law enforcement agency when a person is convicted of a crime of domestic violence that prohibits them from owning or possessing a firearm, to support relinquishment.
- Recommend Certified Batterer Intervention Programs in deferred dispositions and/or sentences as the appropriate and effective community intervention in cases involving domestic violence (17-A M.R.S. §1501(9), 17-A M.R.S. §1807(4)), rather than anger management programs or counseling, including in cases involving a child death that occurs in the context of domestic violence.
- Engage in training and critical incident debriefing to address vicarious/secondary trauma and compassion fatigue. Prosecuting domestic violence cases over a career may have a cumulative effect, as may repeat cases involving the same people. Responding to serious injury cases and homicides may be especially traumatic.

Judiciary (including Bail Commissioners)

- Participate in CCR efforts statewide and locally, including task forces and specialized interagency training for judges, guardians ad litem, and bail commissioners.
- Establish conditions on Protection from Abuse Order defendants and take an active role in determining the appropriateness of criminal sentences proposed by counsel, to align justice system remedies with Maine's statute indicating that a Certified Batterer Intervention Program (CBIP) is the appropriate and effective community intervention in cases involving domestic violence (17-A M.R.S. §1501(9), 17-A M.R.S. §1807(4)), rather than anger management programs or counseling.

- Support statewide implementation of the ODARA and integrate ODARA scores into bail commissioner and judicial decision making.
- Address the lack of ability for bail conditions to be easily and immediately discoverable by law enforcement officials in Maine and across state lines. This applies to people who commit abuse out of state and come into Maine, and to people whose bail conditions originate in Maine and they travel out of state.
- Enhance the timeliness of criminal cases coming to court.
- Clarify communication by judges and court clerks to victims about the differences among types of protective orders and other legal remedies that may be available.
- Provide a standard cover sheet to all family matter paperwork and Protection from Abuse Order complaint paperwork that provides information about community domestic violence organizations, legal assistance and law enforcement.
- Organize Protection from Abuse Order dockets to enable community-based domestic violence organization advocates to be available to plaintiffs, and rely on the work of these advocates to support docket flow, work with parties on protective order negotiations and agreements, and support victims who are completing paperwork and/or appearing in court.
- Recognize that Protection from Abuse Order complaints may not make immediately apparent the overall level of risk a defendant presents to a plaintiff.
- Connect plaintiffs with community-based domestic violence organization advocates prior to dismissing Protection from Abuse Orders.

Corrections (Maine Department of Corrections – Probation)

- Permanently fund specially trained Domestic Violence Probation Officers statewide to propel effective supervision of people who commit domestic violence and continue to seek control over victims through direct contact, claims of homelessness, and pressure on the victims to reunite. People who are victims of domestic abuse and violence and are on probation for related or unrelated crimes also benefit from specialized Domestic Violence Probation Officers who can respond effectively to risks these probationers face.
- Participate in Coordinated Community Response efforts statewide and locally including task forces, high risk response teams and specialized interagency training.
- Train probation officers statewide regarding domestic abuse and violence.
- Support statewide implementation of the ODARA and integrate ODARA scores into probation supervision practices and information management systems.

- Provide timely notification and communication to victims regarding the furlough and/or release of offenders, as well as safety planning in those circumstances.
- Link probation information and status to METRO² for electronic access by law enforcement officers in real time.

Private Bar Attorneys (Criminal Defense and Civil)

The Panel's recommendations in this area largely seek to address the high prevalence of victims of domestic violence who are unrepresented or underrepresented in Protection from Abuse Order and/or criminal domestic violence related cases. In addition, the Panel has repeatedly observed the common occurrence in civil and criminal cases of court orders that direct people who commit abuse to participate in anger management programs or counseling rather than the appropriate intervention of Certified Batterer Intervention Programs.

- Explore through the Maine State Bar Association potential models for a mandated pro bono requirement for all members and develop a standard of practice related to representing parties with domestic violence related criminal or Protection from Abuse Order histories.
- Explore through the Maine Commission on Domestic and Sexual Abuse issues of access to civil-legal representation for victims of abuse, especially in rural or remote areas.
- Encourage attorneys through the Family Law Section of the Maine State Bar Association to address clients' safety issues during initial screenings in divorce cases. Develop guidelines and training for screening/standard assessment questions.
- Be aware of Maine's statute indicating that a Certified Batterer Intervention Program (CBIP) is the appropriate and effective community intervention in cases involving domestic violence (17-A M.R.S. §1501(9), 17-A M.R.S. §1807(4)), rather than anger management programs or counseling. Anger management and counseling are also less likely to reduce recidivism.

Protection from Abuse (PFA) Orders

The Panel's recommendation regarding PFA Orders reflects the fact that most cases reviewed over the past 20 years involved no PFA Orders, notable because this is one of the primary civil remedies in place to protect victims of domestic violence.

- Community members and all professionals working within systems in the Coordinated Community Response to domestic violence should become informed about PFA Orders. Individuals, communities, and systems must then commit to providing information about PFA Orders as a consistent part of their personal and/or professional approach, practice, and/or policy when responding to people who are victims of domestic violence. PFA

² METRO stands for Maine Telecommunication and Radio Operations, and is the message switching system of the Maine Department of Public Safety.

Orders are free, are available on a while-you-wait basis during court business hours, and constrain the defendant from committing further abuse or else be subject to mandatory arrest or contempt of court, depending on the violation.

Health and Behavioral Health Care

Health Care Professionals

In each of its reports, the Panel has observed significant gaps in the health care system. Medical professionals on the Panel reviewed the medical records of perpetrators and victims and rarely found evidence of any screening for domestic abuse and violence. Often the only intervention point that a victim may have is through a contact with the medical community. The contact may be unrelated to domestic violence, or domestic violence may be an underlying cause for the contact. If routine screening occurs, and if domestic violence is disclosed, access to community services and remedies should be provided at that time.

Conversations between health care providers and patients that include information and dialog about abuse within family and intimate relationships have the best potential for reaching victims and offenders with the message that domestic violence is a public health concern. For these conversations to be effective, health care providers and other health care staff require special knowledge and skills, including how to pose sensitive questions, engage in culturally sensitive communication, and in provision of brief interventions and referrals to community-based advocacy organizations. Acquisition of fundamental knowledge and skills should begin during professional preparation programs; periodic education should continue in the health care setting using a variety of strategies.

In its 11th report in 2016, the Panel observed:

“Unfortunately, the healthcare system is one of the weakest links in Maine’s efforts to provide a coordinated community response to domestic abuse.”

In its 11th report, the Panel included extensive information for health care providers, including observations and recommendations specific to brain injury and strangulation, observing the prevalence of these injuries but lack of healthcare intervention observed in the documentation of the cases reviewed.

In each of its reports, the Panel’s recommendations to healthcare providers have reinforced the following practices:

- Adopt evidence-based instruments to screen patients (including children, teens, and older adults) at each healthcare encounter privately and regularly, and especially during pregnancy, for experiences of physical abuse and/or coercive, controlling behavior in their intimate and familial relationships. Universal screening (asking all patients about abuse at each health care encounter) is endorsed by leading medical and nursing organizations. Based on research evidence, the U.S. Preventive Services Task Force recommends that “clinicians screen for intimate partner violence (IPV) in women of reproductive age and provide or refer women who screen positive to ongoing support services” (2018). The screening instrument needs to be included in the electronic health record in a way that is easily accessible to the staff person who is posing the questions and responding to the patient's response to questions. In addition, the questions must be asked again at regular intervals rather than carrying forward the patient's prior responses to all future encounters.

- Appreciate that the focus of screening is less on victims disclosing abuse, and more on providing information to all patients that help is available in many forms, from many systems, when patients are ready to access services.
- Recognize that suicidal ideation by people who commit abuse is strongly linked with homicidal ideation, and ensure that assessments of patients with mental illness and/or presenting with suicidal ideation include questions regarding:
 - Domestic abuse and lethality toward other people;
 - Harm to self;
 - Possession of or access to firearms; and
 - Consent to include information from family members in the assessment to provide a more complete picture of the potential risks posed to self and others.
- Consider possible domestic abuse as the underlying cause of a myriad of symptoms such as headache, abdominal and pelvic pain, sleep disorder, or changes in mood and behavior. These symptoms are more subtle than are overt indicators of physical injury and thus require maintaining a high index of suspicion for domestic abuse in all health care encounters.
- Integrate questions regarding head trauma and post head trauma, signs of post-concussion syndrome with assessment of cognitive/emotional impairment, as well as questions about strangulation during a violent episode.
- Recognize that the postpartum period can be a difficult and/or dangerous time for a family, both in homes with or without people who commit abuse. New mothers may experience physical effects that go undiagnosed and untreated and the risk of harm or injury to children may be elevated. The Panel recommends collaboration with Public Health Nursing to ensure follow up, including home visits to families with newborns.
- If self-harm is reported by a patient or the patient's caregivers, providers should maintain a high index of suspicion of abuse and must ask age appropriate, patient-centric questions in order to ensure that the reported self-harm is not actually abuse inflicted by others.
- For each patient, it is imperative that whenever a new provider comes on board, the provider review the case with a fresh set of eyes and a fresh perspective, and with the understanding that historical case information is sometimes outdated and/or inadequate.
- Document in the medical record, recognizing its potential importance as evidence in court:
 - That screening was completed;
 - Any patient statements;
 - Photographs or documentation on body diagrams and other evidence of injuries;

- Referrals provided; and
- Mandatory reports made to the Maine Department of Health and Human Services as appropriate.
- Hospitals and all medical practices should:
 - Obtain training from a local community-based advocacy organization;
 - Collaborate with the Maine Coalition to End Domestic Violence and/or local community-based advocacy organization in the development and implementation of workplace policies to address domestic violence in the workplace; and
 - Establish referral practices to connect patients and employees affected by domestic abuse and violence with community-based advocacy organization services.
- Develop and implement comprehensive domestic violence educational programs in collaboration with the Maine Coalition to End Domestic Violence, which prepare members of the health care team including nurses, nurse practitioners, physicians, physician assistants as well as support staff such as certified medical assistants and certified nursing assistants. On-site staff education should be conducted on a regular basis for new staff and as a refresher and update for existing health care staff members. This education should at a minimum include the following critical issues:
 - Foundational education about domestic violence;
 - The myriad of ways in which victims and perpetrators may present in any health care setting;
 - The need for routine universal screening and appropriate referrals;
 - Non-fatal strangulation and head injury signs and symptoms, and care and appropriate treatment; and
 - Mandated reporting of child and incapacitated/dependent adult abuse.

Licensed Behavioral Health Professionals

In its work over 20 years, the Panel has reviewed many cases in which perpetrators and/or victims of domestic violence turned to behavioral health professionals for individual counseling and/or couples or marriage counseling. The Panel has observed inconsistent responses from behavioral health professionals who work with victims, in that some would focus on responding to common symptoms such as anxiety or depression, while others would provide support and referrals specifically related to domestic abuse. Likewise, some behavioral health professionals might work effectively with perpetrators of abuse, while others appear to miss signs of escalating danger to victims and/or the perpetrators themselves.

Informed in part by the observations and recommendations of the Panel in its reports over the previous decade, in 2013 the legislature enacted “An Act to Improve Professional Training for Licensed Mental Health Clinicians” (PL 2013 c. 262), including Psychologists (32 M.R.S. §3831(2), Social workers (32 M.R.S. §7053(1)) and licensed clinical professional counselors (32 M.R.S. §13858(2)). These laws require training about intimate partner and family violence for all licensed behavioral health professionals for licensing and renewals as of 2020.

The Panel's biennial reviews over 20 years have exposed a significant systemic gap in services for people living with severe mental illness. Intrafamilial homicides in which adult children kill their parents or caregivers often occur in circumstances when parents or other caregivers feel both unable and afraid to provide ongoing support for the affected person. However, there are insufficient resources for residential or community-based intensive support to provide an alternative.

The Panel observes the unrealistic expectations on law enforcement and the criminal justice system to address the actions of individuals experiencing behavioral health issues and the need for sufficient behavioral health supports and interventions separate from and earlier than interventions by the criminal justice system.

The Panel recognizes the need for more accessible and expanded residential and community-based treatments. Every effort should be made at the state level to maintain/augment the gains made by Medicaid Expansion, even in the face of future budget shortfalls. The Panel observes that funding and services to address behavioral health concerns were severely cut in years past. A lack of services can lead to people suffering from untreated behavioral health concerns and potential harm to those around them.

The Panel observes that behavioral health providers, and healthcare providers in general, often do not recognize intrafamilial conflicts as possible issues involving domestic violence. Failing to recognize domestic violence as a contributor to family dysfunction/conflict could increase the risk of a deadly outcome. The Panel observes the need for referrals to community-based advocacy organizations for families who are experiencing domestic violence.

In each of its reports, the Panel's messages to behavioral health professionals have reinforced the following recommendations:

- Include in any behavioral health assessments:
 - Screening for domestic abuse and violence;
 - Screening regarding possession of or access to firearms; and
 - Questions regarding consent to include information from family members in the assessment to provide a more complete picture of the potential risks posed to self and others.
- Recognize that suicidal ideation by people who commit abuse is strongly linked with homicidal ideation, and ensure that assessments of patients with mental illness and/or presenting with suicidal ideation include questions regarding:
 - Domestic abuse and lethality toward other people;
 - Harm to self;
 - Possession of or access to firearms; and
 - Consent to include information from family members in the assessment to provide a more complete picture of the potential risks posed to self and others.
- Recognize that intrafamilial conflicts may be indicators of domestic violence.

- Recognize that anger management is not the appropriate intervention for perpetrators of domestic violence and refer these patients/clients to Certified Batterer Intervention Programs.
- Develop robust community-based behavioral health services for both crisis intervention and long-term support as a critical need and essential component of intrafamilial homicide prevention.
- Behavioral health agencies and individual practitioners should:
 - Document in the case record:
 - That screening was completed;
 - Referrals provided; and
 - Mandatory reports made to the Maine Department of Health and Human Services as appropriate.
 - Obtain trauma-informed training from the Maine Coalition to End Domestic Violence and/or local community-based advocacy organization to become better equipped to observe and recognize patterns in patients who exhibit violent and or self-harming behavior;
 - Collaborate with the Maine Coalition to End Domestic Violence and/or local community-based advocacy organization in the development and implementation of workplace policies to address domestic violence in the workplace; and
 - Establish referral practices to connect clients and employees affected by domestic abuse and violence with community-based advocacy organization services.

In the current review period, the Panel observed that there is an ongoing lack of availability and continuity of care with respect to behavioral health services in rural and underserved areas. Therefore, behavioral health services are commonly handled by a primary care provider. This lack of access to specialized behavioral health treatment may pose challenges and risks to both the provider and the patient, particularly in cases of high/greater need. Therefore, the Panel recommends:

- Thorough evaluation and follow-up for patients reporting or presenting with psychotic thoughts and behaviors, or other complex mental health issues. These patients require immediate treatment and referral to an appropriate specialized provider (if seen by primary care provider). The primary care provider, in partnership with patient when possible, should seek consultation with a specialized provider, either in person or via telehealth services. In addition, thorough narrative notes should be taken, and questions asked regarding harm to others and access to weapons.
- Use of telehealth be encouraged and expanded statewide. These services will be particularly useful in rural and underserved areas. Protocols should be developed to safely address privacy issues and the inherent risk to victims of domestic violence when accessing telehealth services (i.e. given the power and control dynamics present in interpersonal relationships suffering from domestic violence, the challenge of ensuring that telehealth evaluations are private and confidential is especially important).

Maine Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS): Child Protection, Adult Protection, and Public Health Systems

DHHS' role in the Coordinated Community Response to domestic violence addressed in the Panel's reports spans child welfare, adult protection, and public health. DHHS policy addresses the assessment of domestic violence in families. The Panel has reviewed cases in which DHHS responded to reports of child abuse and neglect, and/or that child homicides occurred, in the context of intimate partner violence or intrafamilial violence. The Panel has also observed in intimate partner violence homicides and intrafamilial homicides a continued gap in reporting - both by those who are statutorily required to report as well as others in the community - when children are at risk or being harmed by a family member. When reports are made, a thorough investigation becomes crucial as no other responding system is charged so essentially with protecting the welfare of children. In cases involving the homicide or homicide-suicide of older adults, the Panel has often encountered a lack of information about the context prior to the homicide and no indicators that the circumstances would warrant a report to Adult Protective Services or other interventions relating to family violence.

Child Protection Services (CPS)

The Panel has observed in homicide cases involving children a lack of mandatory reports to Child Protection Services by those who should have done so. In addition, in cases when reports were made, DHHS investigations have been incomplete. In the current biennium and past reports, the Panel has recommended that DHHS:

- Implement strategies to address training needs, caseload challenges, and access to adequate supervision for CPS staff. This will ensure that reports of suspected child abuse and neglect are thoroughly investigated, and appropriate and effective interventions can be implemented for both the children and adults affected.
- Sustain the Child Protective Liaison collaboration between the Office of Child and Family Services and Maine Coalition to End Domestic Violence. This program supports community-based domestic violence organization advocates partnering with child welfare caseworkers throughout the state. Advocates provide consultation and case specific support to address the complexities of ensuring child safety while minimizing risk and danger to the non-offending parent. Advocates also are beneficial to families and provide support and assistance to the non-offending parent.
- In cases when a child loses a parent(s) and/or sibling(s) to homicide or homicide-suicide, and especially if children have witnessed a homicide or discovered the body, that Child Protective Services act quickly to assess the needs of the child. It is imperative that CPS immediately identify a plan for the safest and appropriate placement and services for surviving children.
- Develop and update training for all legally mandated reporters, as laws change and vigilance declines.

During this biennial review period, the Office of Child and Family Services provided the following summary of internal work and improvements for this report after the homicides of children that were reviewed by the Panel:

FROM THE OFFICE OF CHILD & FAMILY SERVICES (OCFS)

In the span of three months, from December 2017 to February 2018, the Office of Child and Family Services (OCFS) responded to the deaths of two children as a result of abuse and neglect inflicted by their caregiver(s). OCFS had prior involvement with both children and upon learning of their deaths immediately sought to review the previous interactions between child welfare staff and these children/families. This included both a macro (system-level) review and micro review which looked at the specific case decisions in each previous involvement. As a result of these reviews OCFS undertook a number of changes. Among them:

- Modifications to the Alternative Response Program (ARP) which required a new report to the Department when a family failed to engage in ARP services.
- Changes to OCFS' system for tracking reports of abuse and neglect to ensure each new report is documented separately in the Maine Automated Child Welfare Information System (MACWIS).
- Implementation of a case review toolkit for supervisors as they work with caseworkers. This toolkit is meant to strengthen high quality, consistent casework practice and increase oversight and organization of supervisory practice.
- Discontinuing out-of-home safety plans to ensure proper oversight (both by the Department and the Courts) when a child cannot remain safely in their home.
- Procurement of clinical support services for staff.
- Securing Legislative approval for additional staff and studying Maine-specific workload for caseworkers to ensure adequate staffing based on current caseloads.
- Sought and was granted access to confidential criminal history information, including interstate information, resulting in the creation of a dedicated Background Check Unit within OCFS.
- Guidance to all staff regarding requirements for case closure.
- Engagement with the Muskie School of Public Service at the Univ. of Southern Maine to review and update OCFS' policies and explore innovative and more effective means of delivering training to staff.
- Development and implementation of a new Investigation Policy and Structured Decision Making tools in the child welfare investigation process to ensure staff have guidance and support as they make decisions regarding the outcome of an investigation.
- Delivering Motivational Interviewing training to all child welfare caseworkers and supervisors.

In addition, OCFS has focused considerable efforts over the last few years on ensuring transparency throughout its various program areas, including child welfare. This includes the publication of a regularly updated data dashboard which provides information on key child welfare metrics, a regular COVID-19 data report that includes data from all aspects of the child welfare system, and various ad-hoc public reports. OCFS is dedicated to transparency in all aspects of its work, regardless of whether it reflects successes or areas in need of improvement. All of these changes and initiatives were undertaken to improve the safety of children that become involved with child welfare and ensure that OCFS staff have the tools and support they need in order to successfully respond to reports of alleged abuse and/or neglect. It is OCFS' hope that these changes will prevent similar tragedies in the future. OCFS remains committed to working toward a future where all Maine children and families are safe, stable, healthy and happy.

Adult Protection Services / Older Adults

Beginning with its 2008 Report, the Panel has made recommendations regarding cases involving older adults. In cases of intimate partner homicide, the perpetrators and victims have often been married for a long time. In cases when the victims of intrafamilial homicide are older adults, the perpetrators are typically adult children or adult grandchildren, often with significant behavioral health issues. The Panel notes that most often the older adult victims of homicide are not incapacitated or dependent, thus outside the statutory mandate of Adult Protective Services. The Panel further observes the reluctance of these families to ask for assistance from public agencies as they are concerned about the potential legal consequences to their children/grandchildren. The Panel's reports have continued to recommend that:

- Those providing services for older adults obtain training from community-based advocacy organizations to recognize and respond to intimate partner and intrafamilial violence. This is especially important for those who provide services in older adults' homes or in residential institutions and could engage in screening.
- Housing, social services, and home healthcare be expanded to support the needs of older adults and families, including assistance for parents who are full time care providers for their adult children, or grandparents who are full time care providers for their young or adult grandchildren.

Public Health Nursing

For the past decade, the Panel has observed the lack of resources for Public Health Nursing and recommended the restoration and expansion of these essential services, particularly for new parents. In cases of intrafamilial homicide involving infants, the Panel observed a lack of follow-up in the homes of new parents, a role historically filled by Public Health Nurses. Public Health Nurses provide information and support to families, are mandated reporters of child abuse and neglect, and can be a key link between families and other community services.

The Panel observes that the Maine Legislature enacted legislation to restore public health nursing services (22 M.R.S. §1964).

Community: Bystanders, Media, Advocacy Organizations, and Batterer Intervention

Bystanders/Concerned 3rd Parties: Family, Friends, Neighbors, Employers, Schools, and Faith Communities

Beginning with its first report in 2000, the Panel has observed that in a "number of cases...with hindsight, people were not surprised by the events." Often, people were concerned about abuse but felt helpless to do anything. The Panel has continuously observed the fundamental resources and support available to victims of domestic abuse and to the people who are concerned about them.

The Panel made these recommendations in its first and subsequent reports:

- Anyone who is concerned about someone who may be experiencing or perpetrating domestic abuse can call a community-based advocacy organization for help in strategizing ways to effectively help.
- Encourage a victim of abuse to contact a community-based advocacy organization to help break their isolation, connect them with safety planning services, and potentially save their lives. Advocates are experts at safety planning, including in anticipation of, during, or after a separation, when perpetrators are likely to escalate their control tactics.
- Inform a victim of abuse about the option of seeking a civil Protection from Abuse (PFA) Order from District Court. PFA Orders may be a useful part of a victim's safety plan. It is free to file a complaint for a PFA Order, and victims can do this during the court's business hours. PFA Orders constrain the person who is committing abuse and can provide a measure of accountability for a defendant who violates conditions of the Order and becomes subject to arrest or contempt of court, depending on the violation.
- Anyone seeing or hearing dangerous behavior should call law enforcement, and, when the victim is a child or incapacitated/dependent adult, make a report to Child or Adult Protective Services. It is important to keep in mind that reports to DHHS are cumulative, so even a seemingly lower risk concern could become the tipping point towards a life-saving intervention.
- Take seriously any reports of abuse and avoid minimization, particularly when those reports include any reference to suicide or homicide. Identify and act upon the connection between suicidality and homicidality by seeking emergency intervention by law enforcement.
- Lack of resources to access quality childcare, healthcare, housing, transportation, and other essential services contribute to the ability of perpetrators of abuse to maintain their positions of control, contributing to victims' sense of helplessness. Public officials, employers, and policy makers all have roles in making these resources available and known to those who need them.
- Schools should partner with community-based advocacy organizations:
 - To provide youth-focused education regarding domestic abuse and dating violence; and
 - To develop and implement workplace domestic violence policies for schools/districts.

- Community groups and faith communities should seek consultation and training from community-based advocacy organizations to better prepare themselves to prevent and respond to domestic abuse and violence.
- Employers should engage with community-based advocacy organizations for assistance in developing and implementing workplace responses to domestic violence. Developing a policy statement, training supervisors and managers, and rolling out a policy to employees creates the necessary structure to engage in workplace safety planning with employees who are victims, to link employees with community-based advocacy organizations and other resources, and to provide assistance and intervention to employees who commit domestic violence.

Media

In the current and past biennial review periods, the Panel recommends that news media take care not to minimize abuse or shift responsibility for abuse and violence by editorializing about victims or perpetrators when reporting on domestic violence incidents. Denigrating descriptions of victims may appear to be a justification of a perpetrator's use of violence. Positive character reports about a perpetrator not related to the violence may obfuscate the dynamics and impacts of the abuse and violence. Domestic violence, by its nature, involves manipulation and secrecy, so bystanders' lack of recognition of abuse, for example, should be expected and reported through that lens.

Community-based advocacy organizations: the Maine Coalition to End Domestic Violence (MCEDV), the Wabanaki Women's Coalition (WWC), the Maine Coalition Against Sexual Assault (MECASA), and all of their member programs including the Immigrant Resource Center of Maine

The Panel, in all its reports over these 20 years, recommends that professionals and community members in contact with offenders and victims make referrals to the community-based advocacy organizations. Contact information for these organizations is available as Appendix D. The Panel notes that victims of homicide have rarely accessed these services, and all too often records from law enforcement officers, healthcare/behavioral health providers, and other system records and materials available in case reviews do not include documentation that referrals were ever made. Referrals are an immediate way for all Mainers to assist victims of abuse and violence.

Advocates at these organizations are available 24/7 through helplines and during the day for designated walk-in hours. Community-based advocacy organizations provide a range of services designed to help individuals and communities through safety planning, advocacy, and ongoing support. These organizations provide consultation and a wide range of training programs to assist individuals and institutions in shaping their responses to both perpetrators and victims. Since its inception, the Panel has recommended that all professional disciplines collaborate with these organizations to establish and implement referral policies and procedures.

The Panel has recommended that these community-based advocacy organizations expand their outreach efforts to ensure that services are accessible and known to all who need them.

Certified Batterer Intervention Programs (CBIPs)

The Panel has reviewed very few cases in which the homicide perpetrator was ordered to complete a Certified Batterer Intervention Program (CBIP). The Panel has repeatedly observed the prevalence of perpetrators of domestic violence being inappropriately required to attend anger management programs or counseling rather than CBIPs. CBIPs address victims' wishes that people who commit domestic abuse and violence recognize the impact of their behavior, stop the abuse and violence, and improve the well-being of their partners and children³. CBIPs provide people who are abusive an opportunity to recognize and change their abusive behavior, while providing the criminal justice system with an appropriate education mechanism that can both increase public safety and minimize the incarceration of offenders. (See "Pretrial and Post-Conviction Use of Batterer Intervention Programs," Report to Maine's Joint Standing Committee on Criminal Justice and Public Safety Pursuant to L.D. 150, Prepared by the Maine Commission on Domestic and Sexual Abuse, February 2016, p. 2.)

Maine law recognizes CBIPs "as the appropriate effective community intervention" in domestic violence related cases. Judges must make findings on the record that justify a disposition that does not include a CBIP, and a disposition that requires anger management. The effectiveness of Maine's directive regarding CBIPs depends both on the Coordinated Community Response, and on "swift and certain" sanctions for non-compliance by people who commit abuse. (See Chapter 105 Public Law Maine 128th Legislature, and "Pretrial and Post-Conviction Use of Batterer Intervention Programs," p. 5.)

Considerations and Recommendations for All Systems

Through its two decades of biennial reviews, the Panel has identified several considerations and themes common to all community and professional systems. These relate to the difficulties inherent in witnessing and responding to perpetrators and victims of domestic violence. The Panel's observations and recommendations in this area include:

- Research indicates that nearly everyone knows people who perpetrate domestic violence, and nearly everyone knows people who have been victimized. The experiences and impacts are widespread, making it critical to reflect on possible changes to personal approach and professional protocol when a tragedy has occurred. In the cases of community systems, this should take the shape of institutionalized case review, once the emergency has passed, that reflects on met or failed expectations of policy and practice.
- Community members in the lives of victims and perpetrators, such as family, friends, neighbors, co-workers and others, may benefit from seeking ongoing support and guidance from advocates at community-based advocacy organizations. It is not easy to know how to safely respond to victims and perpetrators, given the risks perpetrators may present to anyone who tries to help. Without support, people often choose to distance themselves from the situation, leaving victims more isolated and vulnerable, and perpetrators empowered. Accessing support can increase a community member's knowledge and fortitude to intervene in safe and effective ways.

- Language access for victims, offenders, and family members is imperative to ensure meaningful, timely, and informed access to and participation in all community services and public institutions. The Panel observes, as one example, that family members of homicide victims who do not speak English as their first language may need interpreter services in order to have meaningful victim input to and understanding of the criminal justice process in a homicide prosecution.
- Fidelity to best practices, grounded in knowledge that people who commit domestic abuse and violence create traumatic experiences for victims. Frame responses to victims around the awareness that victims will be impacted in both significant and everyday ways regarding how they perceive themselves, others, and what perpetrators have done.
- Recognize that witnessing people commit abuse, supporting victims who experience the consequences of abuse, responding professionally to perpetrators and victims, being present at scenes of domestic violence incidents, investigating cases, and prosecuting crimes, all can cause secondary/vicarious trauma or “compassion fatigue” over time. People in these roles may become emotionally and physically overwhelmed by the circumstances of domestic violence, particularly when responding to homicides.
- Support and training for first responders and other professionals regarding self-care and professional practices shore up effective responses over time. The effect of burnout and hopelessness can translate into minimizing the risks victims face when they are with dangerous and/or homicidal perpetrators. First responders and other professionals must guard against desensitization due to the cumulative effect of responding to victims and perpetrators, and/or to responding repeatedly to the same people. Repeat offenders are an increased risk, so vigilance over time is critical.
- Routinely engaging in critical incident stress debriefing by responders (law enforcement, Child Protective Services workers, Emergency Medical Technicians, etc.) is an important restorative practice that should address all of the above considerations.

Pages 42 – 46 provide a data summary of domestic abuse homicides in Maine that were reviewed by the Domestic Abuse Homicide Review Panel between 2000-2019.

20 YEAR LOOKBACK DATA: 2000-2019

Introduction:

The following 20 year analysis of domestic abuse homicides in Maine includes cases that occurred between the years of 2000-2019 and that were examined by the Domestic Abuse Homicide Review Panel. The initial domestic abuse homicide data includes both intimate partner (IPV) and intrafamilial homicides (IFV), and then each category is examined in separate detail.

In recent years, the Panel has made it a practice to review more cases involving intrafamilial homicide than in prior years. However, the total number of domestic abuse homicide victims in Maine is not represented in the following data. Cases that have yet to be adjudicated have also been omitted from this report, as well as cases reviewed that involved harm exclusively to the perpetrator.

There were a total of 202 domestic abuse homicide victims in Maine between 2000-2019. This 20 year lookback represents 147 of these victims based on cases reviewed by the Panel, and 129 of their perpetrators. Of these, there were a total of 95 perpetrators of IPV with a total of 101 victims, and 41 perpetrators of IFV with a total of 46 victims. There were 12 perpetrators, all male, who committed multiple domestic homicides and were responsible for the deaths of 32 intimate partner and intrafamilial victims. Perpetrators who committed both IPV and IFV are represented in both specific data examinations to follow.

MAINE CHIEFS OF POLICE ASSOCIATION MODEL POLICY

		Effective Date 02/04/2020	Number 1-3
Subject Domestic Violence
Distribution All Personnel		Amends/Supersedes 1-3 dated 11/01/19

I. Purpose

The purpose of this policy is to provide a consistent process for responding to domestic violence and to prescribe a preliminary course of action that officers should take in response to domestic violence incidents.

II. Policy BOT 3-1 MLEAP 7-10

This agency maintains that the nature and seriousness of crimes committed between family or household members are not mitigated solely because of the relationships or living arrangements of those involved. It is the policy of this agency that domestic violence be treated with the same consideration as violence in any other enforcement context.

It is also the policy of this agency that officers take steps to properly investigate, identify predominant aggressors, and combine the use of appropriate community services with enforcement of the law in an effort to: (1) break the cycle of domestic violence by preventing future incidents or reducing the frequency and/or seriousness of such incidents, (2) protect victims of domestic violence and provide them with support, and (3) promote officer safety when dealing with domestic violence situations.

This agency also recognizes that no one is immune from incidents of domestic violence, including law enforcement. As part of this policy, this agency will take a proactive approach when dealing with any domestic violence committed by agency employees.

Given this is a statutorily mandated policy; officers must abide by this agency's policy as it applies to all standards of the Maine Criminal Justice Academy Board of Trustees. BOT 3-25

Incidents of domestic violence involving agency employees shall be investigated utilizing both the procedures outlined above in this policy, and the following procedures and considerations:

1. Agency Responsibilities

- a. This agency shall, either in response to observed warning signs or at the request of an officer or a member of an agency employee's family, provide non-punitive avenues of assistance to employees, their partners, and other family members to mitigate potential acts of domestic violence.
- b. This agency shall identify a procedure for making confidential referrals to counseling services, either internally or in collaboration with existing community services that have specific expertise in domestic violence.
- c. Information learned by the CLEP about an employee's conduct relating to the commission of domestic abuse, which could include criminal conduct, being a defendant in a temporary or permanent protective order in any jurisdiction, or other conduct reportable to the Maine Criminal Justice Academy under 25 M.R.S. §2806-A & §2807 shall be investigated both criminally and administratively as outlined in Model Policy 1-10 Investigation of Employee Misconduct.
- d. Following a domestic violence incident, the agency shall designate a member of the command staff to act as a principal contact for the victim. The assigned contact officer will:
 - a. Keep the victim apprised of the case throughout the adjudication process.
 - b. Inform the victim of confidentiality policies and their limitations, and ensure that confidentiality is maintained throughout the case.
- e. When responding to a domestic violence incident involving a law enforcement officer or other law enforcement agency employee from another jurisdiction, all law enforcement personnel shall follow the same procedures that are to be followed in responding to a domestic abuse complaint involving an employee from their own agency. The agency shall provide written notification to the CLEO in the suspect's jurisdiction in a timely manner, and if possible within 24 hours.
- f. 25 M.R.S. §2807 requires the Chief Law Enforcement Officer (CLEO) of an agency to notify the Director of the Maine Criminal Justice Academy within 30 days when an officer employed by that agency is convicted of a crime or violation or engages in conduct that could result in suspension or revocation of the individual's certification.
 - i. In practice, this could include for example, a domestic violence related arrest, or being the defendant in a temporary or permanent Protection From Abuse Order.
 - ii. This could also include other conduct not resulting in an arrest, charge or conviction that would constitute engaging in conduct that is prohibited or penalized by state law as murder or a Class A, Class B, Class C or Class D crime or by any provision of Title 17-A, chapter 15, 19, 25, 29, 31, 35, 41 or 45, as per 25 M.R.S. §2806-A(5)(F).

2. Supervisor Responsibilities

- a. Supervisors shall be cognizant of and document all behavior, on-duty or off-duty, in which employees may be exhibiting signs of possible domestic violence related problems, including increased use of force during arrests, alcohol and/or drug abuse, increase in "controlling" behaviors, stalking activity, citizen and fellow officer complaints of unwarranted aggression and verbal abuse, inappropriate aggression towards animals, and on-duty or off-duty injuries. Off-duty related problems and injuries would include problems as a victim or a suspect.

- b. Supervisors shall immediately make their ranking supervisor aware of any and all such behavior.
- c. The CLEO shall be informed of such circumstances or concerns in a timely manner through the chain of command, and if possible within 24 hours.
- d. Whenever an agency employee is arrested, the supervisor shall relieve the employee of any agency-issued weapons provided that the weapons can be legally obtained. The supervisor shall inquire whether the victim wants any weapons removed from the home for safekeeping by the agency and thereafter remove such weapons provided that such removal is accomplished legally.
- e. In the event that an incident involves the CLEO of the agency or the agency of another jurisdiction, the supervisor shall immediately notify the individual who has direct oversight for the CLEO.

3. Responding Law Enforcement Officer Responsibilities

- a. Investigating officers follow all procedures outlined in this policy, in addition to the procedures and considerations in this section.
- b. Upon arrival on the scene of a domestic violence call or incident involving a law enforcement officer or other employee of a law enforcement agency, the primary officer shall immediately notify dispatch, and notify or request notification of a supervisor of higher rank than the involved officer. The ranking officer should report to the scene, regardless of the involved officer's jurisdiction.
- c. Responding officers shall be aware of the heightened risk that a suspect who is a law enforcement officer will likely possess firearms, other weapons, physical combat training, or all three.
- d. Officers should be aware that the suspect might attempt to make emotional appeals to responding officers.
- e. In cases involving a suspect who is a law enforcement officer or other employee of a law enforcement agency, responding officers must respond to the victim in a way that assures the victim that their case will be investigated and handled thoroughly and professionally, without regard for the suspect's employment as a law enforcement officer.
- f. Responding officers shall seek out and preserve secondary sources of information and supplemental evidence, in order to ensure that coercion and tampering is not being attempted or committed, and in order to support the case in the event that the victim may discontinue involvement in the case for safety or other reasons.

4. Law Enforcement Employees Responsibilities

- a. Agency employees are encouraged and entitled to seek confidential assistance from the agency to prevent a problem from escalating to the level of criminal conduct against a family or household member.
- b. Agency employees with definite knowledge of violence and/or violence involving fellow employees must report such information in a timely manner to their supervisor. Failure to do so will subject the employee to disciplinary action.
- c. All employees shall be aware of possible witness or victim intimidation, coercion or tampering. Whenever an employee suspects this is occurring, the employee shall prepare a written report and immediately deliver it to the investigator in charge of the case.

- d. Employees who are the subject of a criminal investigation, protective order related to domestic violence, regardless of jurisdiction, are required to report themselves to the CLEO and provide notice of the court dates, times, appearances, and proceedings in a timely manner.

K. Protection Orders BOT 3-9, 3-17, 3-19

1. General
2. Arrest is mandatory if there is probable cause to believe that a violation of a court-approved Protection Order or a consent agreement has occurred, pursuant to 19-A M.R.S. §4012(5).
3. Once a Protection From Abuse Order has been issued, whether temporary or permanent, officers shall place a high priority on service of the Protection Order, or any modification of such order. The order must be served on the individual, by delivering a copy to the individual personally.
4. If the individual refuses to receive any Protection Order, the officer shall leave the Protection Order in the immediate presence of the individual and advise the individual of the content of the Protection Order, the fact that the individual has been officially served, and the consequences of a violation of the Protection Order.
5. Officers will document all Protection Order services and/or attempts, articulating the circumstances surrounding the service/attempt of the Protection Order. Once service has been made, the serving agency shall ensure the service information is entered into the METRO System without delay and the return of service is sent to the court.
6. Uniform Full Faith and Credit Clause: Officers shall expeditiously enforce valid Protection Orders from other States and Tribal Courts. Officers shall verify the validity of the protection orders prior to enforcing them.
7. Violation of a Protection Order BOT 3-18

A person commits the offense of “Violation of a Protection Order” if:

- a. A District Court has issued a Protection Order, Temporary Protection Order, or any modification of such an order against a person, and that person violates that order;
 - b. The defendant received prior actual notice of the order or consent agreement, which may be by physical service of the order or notice other than service in hand, pursuant to 19-A M.R.S. §4011(1); and
 - c. That person knowingly violated any condition of the Order.
 - d. Officers must recognize that a person who obtains a Protection From Abuse Order cannot violate the order regardless of any action taken by the person or the defendant; the order only constrains the defendant.
8. Enforcement of a Violation of a Protection Order
- Pursuant to 19-A M.R.S. §4012(5), in-custody arrest is mandatory for any violation of a protective order.

L. Agency Follow Up if Victim is Seriously Injured or Killed BOT 3-23

The Chief Law Enforcement Officer (CLEO) of this agency shall cause to have this policy reviewed, and document the agency’s compliance with policy, in the event that a victim of domestic violence who resided in this agency’s jurisdiction is killed or seriously injured during the time that any temporary or permanent Protection from Abuse order (PFA) was in effect or there had been past agency involvement related to interactions between the perpetrator and the victim. The review shall be conducted in consultation with a domestic violence advocate as defined in 16 M.R.S. §53-B(1)(A) and a sworn law enforcement officer designated or trained as a domestic violence investigator. A report shall be prepared and kept on file with the agency.

In any case where one or more victims are killed, a copy of the report shall be forwarded to the Maine Domestic Abuse Homicide Review Panel through the Maine Office of the Attorney General.
