that used for the Department of Environmental Protection. The bill added language to provide a mechanism for the automatic removal of members whose terms have expired. The bill required that one member of the commission be a resident of an organized town under the commission's jurisdiction and an additional member be a resident of an unorganized township within the commission's jurisdiction. The existing statute required one member to be a resident of the commission's jurisdiction. Finally, the bill changed the procedures followed by townships organizing to move out of the commission's jurisdiction. The bill provided that townships which organized would immediately cease to be within the commission's jurisdiction. In addition, the bill significantly reduced the stringency of both the substantive and procedural requirements for the adoption of local land use controls by townships leaving the commission's jurisdiction.

The committee substantially amended the bill to eliminate most of the provisions related to the commission's membership. The committee did increase the number of members with residency within the commission's jurisdiction from 1 to 2. The committee deleted all provisions of the bill related to the adoption of local land use controls by townships leaving the commission's jurisdiction.
