SUMMARY
New Draft Of LD 1937

In 1977, legislation was enacted to prohibit hunting bear within 200 feet of any dump in the unorganized territories. The primary purpose of this legislation was to eliminate the shooting of bear where tourists and local spectators gather to watch and feed them. It does not enhance the image of hunters or trappers when bear are taken close to a dump in their full view. The original bill proposed to increase the distance to 500 yards and to include all dumps in this prohibition.

The new draft increases the hunting free zone to at least 200 yards in recognition that the configuration and geography of some dumps may necessitate a larger buffer zone. It also includes a prohibition for releasing bear dogs in this area and the term "dumps" was better defined to refer to solid waste disposal sites.

The new draft also includes an exclusion for the department to live-trap bears at solid waste disposal sites when they become a nuisance.
