SUMMARY

The bill, as amended, creates an Emergency Response Commission pursuant to recent federal law. The membership of the Commission includes a number of state agencies along with representatives from the private sector, local government and local fire chiefs. The Commission is charged with developing and overseeing a program of planning for emergency responses to accidental releases of hazardous materials and for disseminating public information on the use of these materials in local communities. The bill requires the Commission to report to the Committee by January 1, 1989 on progress in implementing the requirements of state and federal law in this area. Finally, the amended bill requires annual refresher training for employees working with hazardous materials.

SUMMARY

The original bill contained a comprehensive program for local growth management. These provisions were considered in the committee deliberations over LD 2317. The original bill also included a local option transfer tax which towns could use to fund efforts to preserve open space through the formation of local land banks. The minority committee amendment deleted the growth management provisions and reported out only the local option transfer tax and land bank provisions. The Senate accepted the majority ought-not-to-pass report and the House accepted the minority report (H-738) with the result that the bill failed between the houses.
