SUMMARY

This bill makes several miscellaneous changes in the child abuse and protection laws.

It extends the provision permitting the court in a child protection proceeding to order the physical or mental exam to include alleged parents, and any other party seeking custody of the child. It also eliminates the requirement that the court find, by clear and convincing evidence, that the exam is necessary to obtain information that cannot be obtained by other means and makes the procedure subject to the Maine Rules of Civil Procedure.

It authorizes the disclosure to a person making a report of suspected child abuse or neglect that an investigation has not been accepted for investigation.

It extends the mandatory reporting law to include court appointed special advocates and guardians ad litem.
