H-566

SUMMARY

The original bill changes the definition of "river" in the site location of development laws and the mandatory zoning and subdivision control laws to increase the jurisdiction of the Department of Environmental Protection along certain water bodies. Currently, certain types of projects located within 250 feet of a river are subject to Department of Environmental Protection review. The size criterion of the watershed was dropped in favor of a map reference to ease the resolution of questions about which water bodies qualify as rivers.

The committee amendment (H-566) drops any changes to the Site Location Law and instead requires an applicant for local subdivision approval to identify all rivers, streams and brooks on any maps submitted as part of the application.

AMENDMENTS ADOPTED

SUMMARY

The amended version of this bill prohibits the storage or disposal of low-level radioactive waste generated from the production of nuclear power, deregulated or otherwise, at any solid, liquid or hazardous waste facilities except those licensed to handle low-level radioactive waste.

Section 1 and 3 expand the definition of low-level radioactive waste to include wastes generated by nuclear power plants that, in the future, may be classified by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission as "below regulatory concern". This is intended to cover wastes that are radioactive as a result of the process of nuclear power generation rather than wastes that are radioactive because of natural processes. For example, wastes from landscaping the grounds of the Maine Yankee nuclear power plant, that may have background levels of radioactive contamination would not be included in this category.

Section 2 requires that, in Maine, this low-level radioactive waste is to be disposed of at a low-level radioactive waste storage or disposal facility. It also stipulates that by regulating the waste, the state does not assume ownership or responsibility for that waste.
