GOULD R A

OTP-AM

H-329

SUMMARY

Prior to the passage of this bill, the definition of "subdivision" included the creation of a lot of 40 acres or larger in size when the lot from which it was divided is located within a shoreland area. The original bill proposed to amend that definition to provide that a subdivision does not include the creation of a lot that is 40 acres or larger in size except when the lot that is created is within the shoreland area.

12 •Energy & Natural Resources

The committee amendment (H-329) changes the original bill to specify that lots greater than 40 acres created more than 1/4 mile from waterbodies are exempt from review by the Maine Land Use Regulation Commission. These lots are still subject to an existing 10-lot trigger for review. This amendment also requires that plans creating lots subject to this exception must be certified by the commission as meeting these conditions before they can be filed with the appropriate registry of deeds. The commission is required to make that certification within 15 days. The amendment also adds a fiscal note to the bill.

SUMMARY

The bill requires that, when underground tanks are being removed, the flammable gases purged from the tanks and from the trucks that will remove oil from the tanks be vented at least 12 feet above ground level to avoid explosions.

The bill also requires that the removal of underground oil storage tanks that hold Class 1 liquids, including gasoline, be directly supervised by the appropriate professional. Professional firefighters who perform this service must do so in their official capacity and not as an off-the-job enterprise.

The committee amendment (S-48) changes the bill to require firefighters that are supervising the removal of an underground oil storage tank to be certified by the Commissioner of Environmental Protection. It also requires firefighters supervising tank removals to get authorization from the town with which they
