SUMMARY

This bill prevented the State's prevailing wage law from being less effective than federal Davis-Bacon law so that wages and fringe benefits paid on state public works projects must be at least equivalent to wages and fringe benefits paid on federal Davis-Bacon projects.

House Amendment "A" (H-934) replaced the original bill and required the Bureau of Labor Standards to conduct a study on various ways of revising the prevailing wage laws so that the value of fringe benefits may be considered in the calculation of the prevailing wage. The Bureau must make a final report to the Labor Committee by January 31, 1993.

SUMMARY

Under the current labor relations laws governing state, judicial, University of Maine System, Maine Technical College System and municipal public employees, any person who has been employed for less than 6 months is excluded from the protection of collective bargaining laws.

This bill removed the exclusion of employees with less than 6 months of service from the protection of the collective bargaining laws. Those employees consequently would have the right to join and be represented by labor organizations of their own choosing and would have full recourse to the Maine Labor Relations Board if their collective bargaining rights were violated.
