SUMMARY

This bill represented the majority report of the Joint Standing Committee on Banking and Insurance and the Joint Standing Committee on Labor on workers' compensation reform and made changes to the workers' compensation system as follows. It created the Maine Employer's Mutual Insurance Fund. It strengthened the criteria for the review of lump sum settlements. It allowed the predetermination of independent contractor status. It eliminated the ability of loggers and certain construction workers to be independent contractors. It excluded fringe benefits from the wage calculation. It repealed the statewide work capacity limitation. It increased interest and penalties on awards. It eliminated the compensability of certain subsequent injuries. It created a medical utilization review system. It required health care providers to submit initial medical reports within 5 days. It established an Office of Medical Coordination. It required insurers to offer medical expense deductibles. It allowed for 24-hour coverage pilot projects. It limited health care reimbursement and required providers to complete an occupational health program. It allowed self-insured employers to secure their obligations through funding at a 90% confidence level, or through letters of credit.

It required certain employers to complete a workplace health and safety plan and required insurers to offer workplace safety consultations. It made several changes in the rehabilitation system to ensure speedier and less costly rehabilitation. It made claims information confidential. It expanded employee's reinstatement rights. It required adjusters to have authority to settle cases at informal conferences. It limited the ability of insurers to use private investigators. It required notice to employers of settlements and allowed employers to appeal the settlement for use in premium calculations. It required the Superintendent of Insurance to create rules to reduce the residual market, and to reward safe employers.

It made procedural changes as follows: allowed payments without prejudice, encouraged parties to reach provisional agreements for payments, created an expedited process for certain claims, allowed automatic discontinuances under certain circumstances, created an automatic trial work period, created an apportionment system, and replaced the maximum medical improvement standard with a cap of 520 weeks.

House Amendment "B" (H-696) made a number of substantive changes to the bill including: mandated that the Superintendent of Insurance adopt rules to establish dividend plans and premium credits; required the adoption of a Minnesota medical form; clarified that 2 providers from the same field and 1 provider from another field be appointed to the medical utilization panel; clarified that a commute of more than 100 miles may be reasonable if an employee customarily commuted this far pre-injury; extended from 44 days to 75 days the time period for filing a notice of controversy; clarified that benefits may be restored during a trial work period for a termination/suspension, only if it is without good cause; and clarified that liability be apportioned pro rata between insurers based on the number of insurers.
