SUMMARY

This bill provides for assessments on state-chartered financial institutions based on total banking assets. This bill also changes the minimum annual rate of assessment to an amount that maintains the same minimum level of funding to the Bureau of Banking and provides for an increase in that minimum assessment rate through rulemaking. The law establishes a phase-in period with the 6-month period ending December 31, 1992 as the date that the asset-based assessment first applies.

SUMMARY

This bill permits financial institutions to charge a fee for automated teller machine transactions initiated by individuals who have their banking account at a bank other than the bank that owns the automated teller machine. It requires financial institutions to disclose that fee to people using the machines.

Committee Amendment "A", H-958, provides that a financial institution may charge a noncustomer fees for the use of electronic terminals if those fees are prominently displayed and the user has an opportunity to cancel the transaction without incurring a fee. It also allocates the new statutory provisions to another part of the Maine Revised Statutes, Title 9-B, so that the provisions apply to all financial institutions authorized to do business in the State. This amendment adds a fiscal note.
