If you have any suggestions or comments on these summaries, please let us know.

Section 2 of the bill amends the State's energy policy to recognize interruptible capacity resources as a component of demand management.

Senate Amendment B (S-621) replaces the emergency preamble. It also strikes and replaces section 1 of the bill. Substantively, the amendment refines the applicability of the interruptible rate provisions of this bill. Under this amendment, the Public Utilities Commission will not be required to follow these provisions in the rate design case involving Central Maine Power since that case was largely completed on April 1, 1992. The commission will be required to follow these provisions in other rate design cases pending on or initiated after April 1, 1992.

This amendment removes specific reference to peaking capacity costs to allow the commission to consider all utility capacity costs in setting interruptible rates.

This amendment makes other clarifications.

SUMMARY

This bill had a suggested reference to the Utilities Committee but was not referred; rather, the bill was tabled in the Senate and considered informally by the committee.

The bill proposed to eliminate the bonding requirements for persons (other than utilities) who wish to construct and maintain electric lines. It also proposed remedies in cases where lines became unsafe.

The Senate amendment (S-668) replaces the bill. Under the amendment, the bonding requirement is retained but is reformulated to eliminate the "in perpetuity" nature of the existing law which was the source of real practical difficulty for would-be line builders.

The amendment also requires that any written agreements between a utility and a line owner must be recorded in the registry of deeds.

The amendment provides that the owner of the line is responsible for properly maintaining the line and that if the owner fails properly to maintain the line and a municipality incurs any expense as a result, the municipality may assess those expenses to the owner. If the owner of the line fails to pay the assessment, the municipality has a lien on the owner's property for actual costs incurred by the municipality.

The amendment also excepts the bill from the municipal mandate law.
