reportable liabilities since the last disclosure form. The amendment states that the 30-day change report applies to Legislators, executive employees and their immediate families, excluding dependent children.

House Amendment "A" To Committee Amendment "A" (H-935)

This amendment requires the Commission on Governmental Ethics and Election Practices to adopt rules to exclude an estranged spouse or domestic partner from the income reporting requirements for immediate family members of Legislators and executive employees.

Enacted Law Summary

Public Law 2011, chapter 634 makes several changes to the laws that require legislators and certain executive employees to disclose sources of income, interests and liabilities. The law increases the threshold amount that triggers disclosure of income from $1,000 to $2,000. It clarifies the definition of income to mean gross income and to exclude certain things like alimony and child support payments. It specifies that when reporting the source of the income for a legislator, employee or immediate family member, the disclosure must state the position held by the person and the type of economic activity that resulted in the income. It adds a requirement that disclosure reports must be filed within 45 days of leaving legislative service or employment with the executive branch. It clarifies the requirement to disclose when a legislator, an executive employee or members of their immediate family are paid for goods and services provided to a state agency and increases that reporting threshold from $1,000 to $10,000. Chapter 634 also requires that a legislator or executive employee disclose when they are a key decision maker with a political action committee or ballot question committee. It adds a requirement to disclose income of $2,000 or more by a limited liability company, partnership or other business in which a legislator, executive employee or their family members have at least 50% interest in, even if no income was received by that person during the reporting period. Chapter 634 also makes non-substantive changes to laws governing disclosures by legislators and executive employees to provide consistency between the disclosure provisions and to clarify existing law.
